STILL UNDER FIRE

MITCHELL EXAMINED BY THE
MINE ATTORNEYS.
SEVERE CROSS-QUESTIONING
WAGE ISSUE PROMINENT IN THE EXAMINATION.
STRIKE COMMISSION MEETS
NON-UNION MINERS TO PRE-PARE THEIR CASE.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 15.—The coal strike commission resumed its sessions today. After a few preliminaries President Mitchell, who was on the stand all day yesterday, again went into the witness box and his cross-examination by David Wilcox, general counsel for the Delaware and Hudson company, was continued.

Some of the attorneys connected with the case are of the opinion that some arrangement will have to be agreed upon to expedite the proceedings. Each side is anxious for a speedy ending of the hearings, but this will be impossible if the present plans of the contending parties are carried out. The miners have a large number of witnesses to be heard, and the attorneys for each of the coal companies are anxious to cross-examine them. After the miners have closed their case the companies will also present a long line of persons to testify, and it is the intention of the lawyers on the miners' side to cross-examine the witnesses for the companies.

Immediately after the opening of the morning session, Chairman Gray for the commission, addressed John T. Lennahan, one of the attorneys for the non-union men. At yesterday's session Mr. Lennahan said he represented the non-union men who worked during the strike and wanted to know what their status would be before the commission.

GRAY STATES DECISION.
Judge Gray said the commission could not give a decision until after it had carefully considered the matter, and promised some sort of an answer today. This morning the chairman said:

"The commission have considered the matter of your application and have decided that it will ask you to submit to them a statement showing whom you represent, by what authority, what points other than those already at issue between the formal parties to this controversy you wish to inject into this hearing, and a concise statement of what you claim, or what your position is in regard to the general proposition between the formal and logical parties to this commission and also state that you guarantee submission to award of this commission."

Mr. Lennahan asked: "How soon must this be done?"

"As soon as you can," replied Judge Gray.

MITCHELL ON THE STAND.
After Judge Gray's announcement to the attorneys for the non-union men, Mr. Wilcox resumed his cross-examination of Mr. Mitchell. He put in evidence extracts from the proceedings of the Shamokin convention, which formulated the demands which caused the last strike; a copy of the United Mine Workers' Journal, the official organ of the union, and a voluminous copy of the Federationist, the official publication of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Mitchell, answering a question by Mr. Wilcox, said that the local unions or mass meetings may direct the operations of pickets. Mr. Wilcox then read from a statement made by President Gompers, of the Federation of Labor, at the Chicago trust conference, in September, 1899, in which Mr. Gompers is alleged to have said that any trust legislation which did not specially exempt organized labor from its operations would meet the unquestioned opposition of all the labor forces, and asked the witness if that expressed his views. Mr. Mitchell replied that organized labor would not look with favor upon any law that would legislate them out of business.

Mr. Mitchell answering further questions said he regarded as living wages for a miner not less than $600 per annum, which would cover his actual necessities and permit him to educate his children.

At this point Judge Gray asked the witness if he meant to say a wage sufficient to permit the children to avail themselves of the public schools or to spend a portion of the family income directly for education, and sufficient to render it unnecessary to employ child labor to increase the income of the family. The witness answered in the affirmative.

On the question of the minimum age at which a boy should go on the breaker, Mr. Mitchell said he would advocate that it be put at fourteen years.

REGARDING WAGES.
Mr. Wilcox examined Mr. Mitchell at some length regarding the various demands of the miners.

"Do you know the wages that are paid are about $60,000,000?" Mr. Wilcox asked.

"I have read that statement," the witness answered.

"Don't you or your committee know it?" inquired Mr. Wilcox.

"No, sir, we don't," responded Mr. Mitchell.

"This is a demand of $12,000,000 increase in the cost of production," said Mr. Wilcox.

"On that calculation, yes," replied the witness, "that would be about 12 or 13 cents a ton."

Mr. Wilcox took up one of President Barr's statements and Mr. Mitchell answered.

STUDENTS IN A NEW ROLE

DISGUISED AS TRAMPS ARE EMPLOYED AS REPEATERS.

Secure Evidence Against Police Captains. Two of Whom Are Arrested for Election Frauds.

New York, Nov. 15.—Two district captains in the Ninth assembly district have been held by Magistrate Bowler in bonds of $4,500 each, to answer charges of violating the election law. The evidence in the case was procured by six young college men, who volunteered their services to Superintendent of Elections McCullagh. One of the young men is said to be a millionaire. Another is a young physician, and the four remaining are medical students. They claim to have made themselves noticeable around West Twenty-sixth street just before election day. Disguised as tramps they were accosted by workers who, after becoming acquainted, disposed of them in various rooms. On election day they say they were provided with slips bearing the names of men who had registered in good faith, but who had been called away. In this manner they say they voted many times apiece, and for each ballot they alleged they received $3. Superintendent McCullagh's deputies at the polls were aware of their movements, and the ballots are said to have been marked for identification. The plan came near ending disastrously in one booth where the alleged "repeater" had been provided by mistake with a slip bearing the name of a negro.

The exposures have caused a sensation among the politicians of the district, as the officials claim their agents were admitted to the clubs and availed themselves of every opportunity for collecting information.

HOME FROM EUROPE.
S. F. Bowser returned last evening from a three months' trip abroad in the interest of S. F. Bowser & Co. Mr. Bowser was accompanied by Ross McClure, who will remain in England until spring, and visited many points of interest on the continent and in Britain. Mr. Bowser states that the business outlook is excellent and that he expects to have a number of agents abroad next year.

HOTEL IN QUARANTINE.
Waterloo, Ind., Nov. 15.—The Locke hotel, the most prominent in this place, is closed under quarantine on account of smallpox. The proprietor, Ab Kelly, is a victim of the disease, and rigid restrictions have been thrown about the house. There are now ten or twelve cases of smallpox in Waterloo.

FARM HOUSE IS BURNED.
The residence occupied by Isaac Forsythe, in Aboit township, was totally destroyed by fire last Saturday evening, while the members of the family were absent attending church. The blaze originated from a defective chimney, and neighbors who saw the flames were able to save a small portion of the household effects. The residence was owned by Dr. Grady, of Coesse, and the loss will be about $400.

HAD A BANQUET.

No. 19, Pathfinders, had an interesting meeting last evening, followed by a banquet at which there were 300 participants. Fifty or sixty people from Huntington were in attendance, making the trip to and from the city on a special interurban car. Before the social session, a class of seventeen applicants were initiated into the order.

YALE FAR IN LEAD

PLAYING ANNUAL GAME IN PRINCETON.

SONS OF OLD ELI STRONG

TIGERS UNABLE TO STAND UP AGAINST ONSLAUGHT.

IMMENSE CROWD PRESENT

SCORE FIRST HALF IS YALE, 12 PRINCETON, 5.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 15.—Princeton and Yale will meet this afternoon on Old Nassau field in their annual football game.

The score at the end of the first half was:

Yale, 12.
Princeton, 5.

No football contest of the year is fraught with so great interest. This fact was made apparent early yesterday when advance guards of graduates and friends of the teams began arriving. This transient traffic continued until the last train at night and began again on the first train this morning.

Princeton is in gala attire for the occasion. All places of business are bedecked with the colors of the two universities and there is scarcely a dwelling, from the handsomest mansion to the humblest cottage, that does not fly either the blue or orange and black. The day broke cloudy and with an almost impenetrable fog hanging over the town and surrounding country. Toward 10 o'clock, however, the fog lifted and the sun peeped through the quickly disappearing clouds. There was a light breeze from the south and the weather was almost too warm for the comfort of the young giants who faced each other at 2 o'clock. The Princeton team rested at the club house, close to the field, last night. The players were up early and seemed to be in the pink of condition.

The Yale eleven reached here at noon from New York and went at once to the club house, where the players remained until time to make appearance. Trainer Murphy said all the players were in fine condition with the exception of Left End Rafferty and Captain Chadwick. The latter is a little finely drawn and Rafferty has a bad bruise on his head, compelling him to wear a bandage.

It is estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 persons will witness the game.

Matthew McClung, jr., of Lehigh, is referee, and Paul J. Dashiell, of Lehigh, is umpire.

THE LINE-UP OF TEAMS.
The teams will line up as follows:

| Princeton. | Position.      | Yale.    |
|------------|----------------|----------|
| Davis      | Left end       | Rafferty |
| Brown      | Left tackle    | Kinney   |
| Bradley    | Left guard     | Glass    |
| Short      | Center         | Holt     |
| DeWitt     | Right guard    | Goss     |
| Reed       | Right tackle   | Hogan    |
| Henry      | Right end      | Shevlin  |
| Pearson    | Quarterback    | Rockwell |
| Hart       | Left halfback  | Chadwick |
| Foulke     | Right halfback | Metcalfe |
| R. McClure | Fullback       | Bowman   |

The crowds began to enter the grounds as early as 12 o'clock, scores of spectators having brought their lunches to the grounds. Half an hour before the time to begin, 2 p. m., there was scarcely a vacant seat in the huge amphitheater.

THE WEATHER IDEAL.
The weather was ideal for the great crowd of on-lookers, but a trifle too warm for the players. There was a light breeze blowing directly across the field, but this was to the advantage of neither team.

At 2 o'clock the Yale team trotted into the field. Three minutes later the Princeton eleven came on, headed by Jim Robinson, carrying the pet tiger in a cage.

Princeton won the toss and chose to defend the south goal, and at 2:15 o'clock the game began, Bowman kicking off for Yale.

After five minutes of play Yale fumbled and Pearson getting the ball for Princeton, carried it fifteen yards to Yale's 35-yard line. DeWitt dropped immediately and made a beautiful try for a goal from the field, missing by less than five feet.

PRINCETON'S FIRST GOAL.
DeWitt kicked a goal from the 45-yard line. Score—Princeton, 5; Yale, 0.

Chadwick got the ball for Yale in mid-field and ran fifty-two yards for a touchdown. Score—Princeton, 5; Yale, 5.

Bowman kicked the goal for Yale. Score—Princeton, 5; Yale, 6.

The game progressed from this point with little advantage for either side. Both Yale and Princeton suffered penalties for off-side and holding. DeWitt, Princeton's great kicker, was hurt twice and the game was delayed while he recovered.

Princeton got the ball for holding on Yale's 23-yard line.

On the next play Princeton lost the ball for holding.

Yale had the ball on her own 30-yard line and worked desperately to advance it. Princeton was holding finely, yet Yale was able to carry the ball 23 yards by straight line plunges.

With the ball in Yale's possession on Princeton's 45-yard line there was a respite while the damage inflicted on two or three players was repaired. Then they went at it again and Yale lost the ball for holding on Princeton's 40-yard line. A fake kick gained five yards for Princeton. This advantage was almost entirely lost on the next line-up and DeWitt was called upon for a punt. Metcalfe caught the ball on Yale's 25-yard line and carried it back 18 yards before he was downed.

YALE'S SECOND GOAL.
Chadwick got through and carried the ball sixty yards for a touchdown. Score: Yale, 11; Princeton, 5. Bowman kicked the goal. Score: Yale, 12; Princeton, 5.

DeWitt kicked off to Yale's 5-yard line. The ball was carried back 20 yards.

Line plunges advanced the ball to the center of the field, Princeton not being able to withstand the heavy rushes of her opponent.

An injury to R. McClure caused a delay of several minutes. When play was resumed Princeton held better and forced Yale to kick. Pearson caught the ball for Princeton and was downed on Princeton's 25-yard line. Princeton returned the kick and it was Yale's ball in mid-field.

First half over, 3:22 p. m. Yale tried an end run and lost four yards. This forced a kick and at this moment the first half ended with the ball in Princeton's possession on her own 20-yard line.

Score First half—Yale, 12; Princeton, 5.

The team lined up for the second half at 3:35 o'clock, Tooker replacing Henry at right end for Princeton. There was no change in Yale's line-up.

CHICAGO MEETS MICHIGAN.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—For the eleventh time since 1892 two teams, Michigan and Chicago, which always play their most desperate football game against each other, met today on Marshall field.

The betting before the game was much in favor of the Wolverines. Even money was freely offered that Chicago would not score and that Michigan would win by twenty points or more. One Michigan man offered odds that Chicago would not have the ball inside Michigan's fifteen-yard line and his money went like a flash.

In general figuring was on the size of Michigan's score, although by no means did the Maroons lack supporters who looked for victory and covered the tempting bets of the maize and blue followers.

The day was ideal for the game, being sufficiently cool for overcoats for the first time during a game this season.

The line-up:

| Michigan  | Position       | Chicago   |
|-----------|----------------|-----------|
| Redden    | left end       | Speik     |
| Palmer    | left tackle    | Kochler   |
| McGugin   | left guard     | Ahlswede  |
| Gregory   | center         | Ellsworth |
| Carter    | right guard    | Maxwell   |
| Maddock   | right tackle   | Farr      |
| Sweeney   | right end      | Catlin    |
| Weeks     | quarterback    | Sheldon   |
| Huston    | left halfback  | Schnur    |
| Hernstein | right halfback | Bezdok    |

Umpire, Starbuck, of Cornell; referee, Beechman, of Cornell.

There were between 8,000 and 10,000 people in the grounds when the game began.

Michigan won the toss.

After long and hard play Sweeney kicked a goal from field. Score: Michigan, 5; Chicago, 0.

Huston ran down the field for a touchdown. Score: Michigan, 10; Chicago, 0.

Score end first half: Michigan, 10; Chicago, 0.

FIRES AT LEOPOLD

ANARCHIST SEEKS LIFE OF BELGIAN KING.

THREE SHOTS ARE SENT WILD

ATTEMPT ON MONARCH'S LIFE

STIRS THE PEOPLE

POLICE PROTECT ASSAILANT

MAN, AN ITALIAN ANARCHIST, ADMITS PURPOSE.

Brussels, Nov. 15.—Three shots were fired at the king of the Belgians this morning as he was proceeding to the cathedral to attend a te deum in memory of the late Queen Marie Henriette. No one was hurt.

The man who fired the shots is an Italian. He stood in front of the Bank of Brussels on the Rue Royale. The other cartridges in his revolver proved to be blank, as it is presumed that those fired were equally harmless. The man was immediately arrested and the police had some difficulty in rescuing him from the hands of the crowd. He gave the name of Rubino.

The royal cortege consisted of several carriages besides that of the king, containing the count and countess of Flanders, Prince and Princess Albert of Flanders, the Princess Clementine and ladies-in-camp and ladies of honor.

Rubino is a bookkeeper. He was born at Bimardo near Naples, in 1859, and has lately lived in Brussels.

MAN IS AN ANARCHIST.

When examined by the police Rubino confessed that he intended to shoot King Leopold and said he held anarchist beliefs.

A fuller investigation satisfied the police that Rubino really fired a ball cartridge, the bullet of which smashed the window of Comte D'Oultremont's carriage and grazed the grand marshal's face.

When rescued from the mob Rubino was placed in a cab and infuriated crowds of people immediately surrounded it and attacked the vehicle with knives and sticks. The police had great difficulty in forcing a way to the police station through the crowd, which shouted alternately: "Kill him" and "Long live the king." The cab was badly hacked with knives.

A search of the prisoner revealed a package of ball cartridges.

PLANNED TO MURDER KING.
It is reported that Rubino had been heard to express anarchist opinions and it was also said that he came to Brussels from London expressly to kill King Leopold and went to the cathedral today for this purpose, but refrained from shooting at the king for fear of killing soldiers who stood between him and his majesty.

Rubino is also reported to have said he was employed in the Italian secret service in London and that he came to Brussels a fortnight ago with the intention of assassinating King Leopold.

The news of the outrage spread rapidly throughout the city and the greatest excitement prevailed. The people thronged the streets, eagerly discussing the attempt on the life of the king, and large crowds gathered in front of the various bulletin boards. The newspapers issued frequent editions and these were eagerly bought. General abhorrence was expressed by the people at the appar-

DR. SWAIN INSTALLED.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 15.—In the presence of leading educators from all parts of the country, Dr. Joseph Swain, late president of the University of Indiana, was today formally installed as president of Swarthmore college.

The inaugural exercises were held in Collection hall. Joseph Wharton, of this city, presided and delivered a brief address on behalf of the board of managers. Dean Elizabeth Bond, A. M., spoke for the faculty. Hon. John Kelvey Richards, A. B., United States solicitor general, and Alexander Griswold Cummins, of New York, spoke for the alumni.

Greetings from colleges and universities were delivered by M. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr college; Wm. Rainey Harper, LL. D., president of the University of Chicago, and Nicholas Murray Butler, LL. D., president of Columbia university. President Swain concluded the formal exercises with his inaugural address.

HOLD SPECIAL SERVICE.

Sunday evening at Emanuel Lutheran church a special service for young people will be held, and Rev. Gross will preach. The service is in celebration of the anniversary of Martin Luther's birth.

HUNDREDS KILLED

DETAILS OF VOLCANO'S WORK IN GUATEMALA.

DESTRUCTION IS APPALLING

DESCRIBED AS WORSE THAN THAT ON MARTINIQUE.

PLANTATIONS WIPED AWAY

HAVOC IS WIDESPREAD AND COMPLETE.

New York, Nov. 15.—Astonishing revelations of great loss of life and property caused by the eruption of the Santa Maria volcano are being made daily, says a cablegram to the Herald from Guatemala City under date of Nov. 9, transmitted by way of San Salvador. Eruptions continue.

Many hundreds of human beings perished and the destruction of property is considered greater than that in the island of Martinique by the eruptions of Mont Pelee.

All of the estates in the neighborhood of the volcano are buried under volcanic ashes, which reach to the tops of houses.

The richest coffee estates are completely ruined. The principal losers are the large coffee planters, mostly United States citizens and Germans, whose properties are ruined.

Two or three new craters have been formed on the side of the volcano. There were no eruptions from the summit. Pumice and ashes were carried chiefly in the southern and western directions. The sea has a coating of volcanic material extending for many miles.

The loss of the coffee crop, which is Guatemala's principal export, has completely demoralized commerce and the government finances generally.

The national paper currency, which is the only circulating medium, has fallen to seven cents gold for one paper dollar.

Prices for all necessities have risen to a prohibitive figure for many persons. The authorities are trying to force the dealers to sell goods at the usual prices, but the condition of affairs is such that business is entirely paralyzed. Violently worded handbills and posters are being circulated.

WILL MAKE OFFICIAL VISIT

DEPT. COMMANDER STARR, OF THE G. A. R., COMING.

Campfire for Old Soldiers to Be Held in the Assembly Room of Court House Friday Night.

Department Commander Benjamin Starr, of Richmond, Ind., with his adjutant general, R. M. Smock, of Indianapolis, and department chaplain, I. P. Watts, of Winchester, Ind., will make an official visit to Anthony Wayne Post, G. A. R., next Friday evening. The commander has requested the comrades of Sion S. Bass and General Lawton posts and all comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic to meet him.

Anthony Wayne post desires to extend this invitation to comrades of the Union Veteran Legion and ex-union soldiers generally to meet in the assembly room of the court house on Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock for a grand rally of ex-soldiers of the civil war and their friends in order to give the distinguished guests a royal welcome. The meeting will be in the nature of a campfire and the program will be an attractive one.

LOCAL LINES.

Mrs. C. E. Taylor, of 716 Madison street, went to Chicago today for a visit with friends.

The M. and G. Mandolin club will play at the St. Joe Athletic club rooms tomorrow afternoon.

Degree of Honor No. 23 will give a rummage sale on Calhoun street next week. It will be held in the Ferguson building, but the date of the opening is yet in doubt.

A masquerade party was given at Miss Irene Seibert, at her home on Hugh street, Thursday night, which proved to be a most enjoyable affair. The best characters were said to be that of the clown and the tramp. There were fifteen couples present.

George W. Dodson, manager of the Shrington, of the Fort Wayne Spring and Paving company, has commenced to put the Warren dam on Brand road on the new Pottsville round house. This will be the first of several new buildings.

KING LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM.

MAY SEE METEORS TONIGHT

THE LEONID DISPLAY IS DUE
ONCE MORE.

Northeastern Heavens Are Scheduled for a Gorgeous Show in Early Morning Hours.

The Leonid meteors are due to appear tonight, and Fort Wayne citizens who are willing to devote some of the hours closely following midnight tonight to keeping tab on the heavens will in all probability be rewarded by a glimpse of an unusually brilliant meteoric display.

For the past three or four years the astronomers have been expecting the return of the Leonid meteors, but have been repeatedly disappointed. However, there is a probability that there will be a display this year. Such an uncertainty as this, in regard to the time an event is to take place, is so unusual in the science of astronomy that an explanation of the nature of a meteor swarm may be of interest to the public.

It has long been known that there is an intimate connection between comets and swarms of meteors. A mass of gas may be ejected from one or other of the fixed stars, by some force akin to a volcanic eruption, and hurled into space with velocity sufficient to expel it so far from the surface of the star that its power of attraction is insufficient to recover the body of gas, and thereafter it will pursue travels of its own through space. Explosions almost that violent have actually been witnessed upon the sun, and it is the star with which we are most familiar.

If a body of gas, thus introduced into our inter-stellar space, should journey near enough to the solar system to begin to feel the sun's attraction, is almost certain to be drawn toward it and go rushing through the system in the curve of a projectile, technically known as a parabola. The chances are hardly one in several millions that it should be aimed exactly at the sun, consequently it would pass to one side of that body, and off again into space beyond. A comet is such a body of gas.

Now, if the visitor should be pursuing a path that brings it near one of the larger planets of the solar system, the velocity with which it moves is likely to be affected enough to change the orbit in which it was moving from a parabola to a very elongated ellipse. The orbit in which the comet came to us is not a closed curve; and if the velocity of travel remains undisturbed, the one visit is the only one it will ever make to the solar system. But if the velocity is diminished by the attractive power of a planet, the result is to make the orbit become an ellipse, and that is a closed curve. If that takes place, the comet thereafter traverses over and over the same path periodically. The ellipse in which a comet moves differs from the orbit of a planet, in that the latter is nearly circular, with the sun almost in the center, while the path of the former is much elongated, very slim, and the sun far down at the end of the oval. It will thus be seen that every time a comet traverses its orbit, its path may cross the track of several planets. If any one of these bodies chances to be in that portion of its orbit adjacent to the comet as it passes, the planet's influence is likely to effect a change in the shape of the comet's orbit, and correspondingly modify the time required for it to go around the sun. Hence these wanderers are likely to be quite a little irregular in their motion and uncertain in the dates of their reappearance.

It will now be evident that in the course of centuries, all the periodic comets will repeatedly pass near planets. As comets are not solid bodies, but consist mainly of minute solid particles widely separated, and each surrounded by enveloping gas, their bulk is enormous, while their density is very small. Indeed we would probably suffer but little if any damage, if mother earth and a large sized comet were to plunge head-on into collision. A body constructed in the manner just described, can hardly have much coherence of its parts, but will easily pull apart. Some comets are hundreds of times as large as the sun, but probably do not have in their constitution material, if compressed sufficient to be like earth or rock, to make a planet more than ten or fifteen miles in diameter.

From the facts that have been presented the reader will see that the disturbing power of the planets will sooner or later tear a periodic comet all to pieces; and, instead of a comparatively collected body, the orbit will be strewn with a stream of little solid particles or meteorites and the attendant enveloping gas. If the earth were to intersect the path of this swarm, and should pass across it, when the debris is in that portion of the orbit, the little particles would rain down upon us and we would have a meteoric shower. That is precisely what we are to expect about the middle of the present month.

The old comet, whose partial disintegration produced the Leonid meteors, was doubtless captured as it came into the solar system from interstellar space. This probably took place in the year A. D. 126, as it that year passed quite near the planet Uranus, when its former path, of the shape of a parabola, was changed by the influence of this planet into an ellipse. The period required for the comet to complete its circuit was about thirty-three years. In traversing this orbit the comet has repeatedly crossed the track of the large planets Jupiter and Saturn. By their influence its motion has been disturbed and the body itself so torn asunder that there is but little remaining to bear the semblance of a comet; but about one-tenth of the orbit is thickly strewn with meteoric matter.

The earth crosses the path of this old comet about Nov. 14 of each year; and when the meteors are in that portion of the orbit we have a meteoric shower. This occurs about every thirty-three years, though, as has been explained, the attraction of Jupiter or Saturn may change the period materially. This has happened several times. The swarm is now spread out along the orbit so far that it requires about three years for all of it to pass a given point. Last year we encountered the straggling vanguard of the stream and meteors were numerous the early morning of Nov. 15. Of course, it is possible that the large planets named may have affected the swarm by capture or otherwise, so that the display will be meager; but astronomers quite generally anticipate brilliant pyrotechnics tonight, especially along towards the early dawn of tomorrow.

The stream is called Leonid because the meteors seem to come from the direction of the constellation Leo. The exact portion of the sky to be watched by the observer is marked by stars which quite clearly outline a sickle. This constellation rises some distance north of the east point on the horizon, about 1 o'clock in the morning, on the date when the display is expected. It will be useless to look for Leonid meteors before midnight, but after that the display is likely to be increasingly beautiful as early dawn approaches. The writer believes it would amply compensate every one interested in the phenomena in the sky to spend all the latter part of the night designated in watching the northeastern regions of the blue dome.

LED DOUBLE LIFE FOR YEARS.

Marion, Ind., Nov. 14.—The death of Thomas N. Davis, a member of the soldiers' home, brought to light the fact that the man had been living a double life for over twenty-five years. Shortly after the close of the war Davis was married in Bowling Green, Ind. Two sons were born to the young couple, and five years later Davis left home, going to Texas and West Virginia, where he was married again without securing a divorce from his first wife. A son and daughter were the fruits of the second marriage. After five years with his second family Davis again deserted and wandered all over the country.

He applied for a pension ten years ago, and had to return to Bowling Green for his old discharge papers. Then he again lived with his first wife for a time, and afterward going to Terre Haute, where he made his home with his son until he became paralyzed three years ago and was removed to the soldiers' home in this city.

His second wife learned of his illness and with her children removed to Marion. He died Tuesday and both wives and their children attended the funeral yesterday, when they learned for the first time that the husband and father had led a double life. It was a pretty scene when the half brothers and sisters met and became friends and the mothers wept on each other's shoulders.

With sixteen stores throughout the United States doing a total business of more than Ten Million Dollars a year, is it any wonder that we should have advantages in buying and selling?

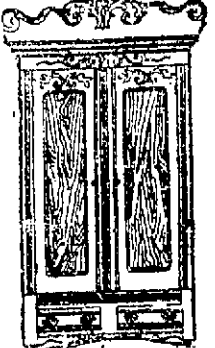

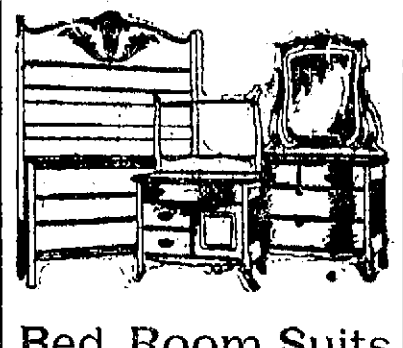

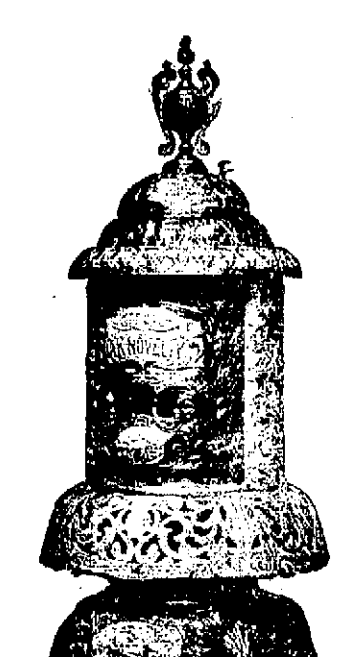

The foundation of our success has been the liberal credit which we extend to rich and poor alike, making no distinction whatsoever. An honest name takes the place of a bank account here.

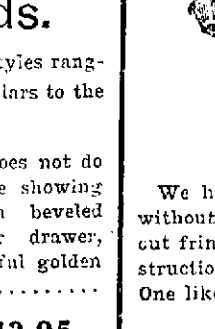

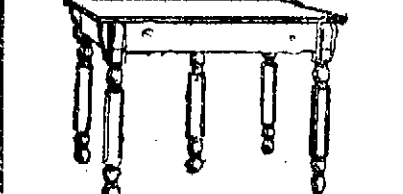

Get the "Black List" of any retail Credit Association and you'll find very few names of the working class on the list. The extensive business built up on our liberal credit plan enables us to undersell many so-called cash houses by 25 to 33 per cent at least.

The entire commercial world is built upon credit. The establishment which refuses to extend you this accommodation would soon crumble to the earth if in turn refused credit by the makers, or the jobbers.

MITCHELL EXAMINED BY THE
MINE ATTORNEYS.

SEVERE CROSS-QUESTIONING
WAGE ISSUE PROMINENT IN
THE EXAMINATION.

STRIKE COMMISSION MEETS
NON-UNION MINERS TO PRE-PARE THEIR CASE.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 15.—The coal strike commission resumed its sessions today. After a few preliminaries President Mitchell, who was on the stand all day yesterday, again went into the witness box and his cross-examination by David Wilcox, general counsel for the Delaware and Hudson company, was continued.

Some of the attorneys connected with the case are of the opinion that some arrangement will have to be agreed upon to expedite the proceedings. Each side is anxious for a speedy ending of the hearings, but this will be impossible if the present plans of the contending parties are carried out. The miners have a large number of witnesses to be heard, and the attorneys for each of the coal companies are anxious to cross-examine them. After the miners have closed their case the companies will also present a long line of persons to testify, and it is the intention of the lawyers on the miners' side to cross-examine the witnesses for the companies.

Immediately after the opening of the morning session, Chairman Gray for the commission, addressed John T. Lenahan, one of the attorneys for the non-union men. At yesterday's session Mr. Lenahan said he represented the non-union men who worked during the strike and wanted to know what their status would be before the commission.

GRAY STATES DECISION.
Judge Gray said the commission could not give a decision until after it had carefully considered the matter, and promised some sort of an answer today. This morning the chairman said:

"The commission have considered the matter of your application and have decided that it will ask you to submit to them a statement showing whom you represent, by what authority, what points other than those already at issue between the formal parties to this controversy you wish to inject into this hearing, and a concise statement of what you claim, or what your position is in regard to the general proposition between the formal and logical parties to this commission and also state that you guarantee submission to award of this commission."

Mr. Lenahan asked: "How soon must this be done?"

"As soon as you can," replied Judge Gray.

MITCHELL ON THE STAND.

After Judge Gray's announcement to the attorneys for the non-union men, Mr. Wilcox resumed his cross-examination of Mr. Mitchell. He put in evidence extracts from the proceedings of the Shamokin convention, which formulated the demands which caused the last strike; a copy of the United Mine Workers' Journal, the official organ of the union, and a voluminous copy of the Federationist, the official publication of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Mitchell, answering a question by Mr. Wilcox, said that the local unions or mass meetings may direct the operations of pickets. Mr. Wilcox then read from a statement made by President Gompers, of the Federation of Labor, at the Chicago trust conference, in September, 1899, in which Mr. Gompers is alleged to have said that any trust legislation which did not specially exempt organized labor from its operations would meet the unquestioned opposition of all the labor forces, and asked the witness if that expressed his views. Mr. Mitchell replied that organized labor would not look with favor upon any law that would legislate them out of business.

Mr. Mitchell answering further questions said he regarded as living wages for a miner not less than $600 per annum, which would cover his actual necessities and permit him to educate his children.

At this point Judge Gray asked the witness if he meant to say a wage sufficient to permit the children to avail themselves of the public schools or to spend a portion of the family income directly for education, and sufficient to render it unnecessary to employ child labor to increase the income of the family. The witness answered in the affirmative.

On the question of the minimum age at which a boy should go on the breaker, Mr. Mitchell said he would advocate that it be put at fourteen years.

REGARDING WAGES.
Mr. Wilcox examined Mr. Mitchell at some length regarding the various demands of the miners.

"Do you know the wages that are paid are about $80,000,000?" Mr. Wilcox asked.

"I have read that statement," the witness answered.

"Don't you or your committees know it?" inquired Mr. Wilcox.

"No, sir, we don't," responded Mr. Mitchell.

"This is a demand of $12,000,000 increase in the cost of production," said Mr. Wilcox.

"On that calculation, yes," replied the witness, "that would be about 12 or 13 cents a ton."

Mr. Wilcox took up one of President Bar's statements and Mr. Mitchell.

STUDENTS IN A NEW ROLE

DISGUISED AS TRAMPS ARE EMPLOYED AS REPEATERS.

Secure Evidence Against Police Captains. Two of Whom Are Arrested for Election Frauds.

New York, Nov. 15.—Two district captains in the Ninth assembly district have been held by Magistrate Barlow in bonds of $4,500 each, to answer charges of violating the election law. The evidence in the case was procured by six young collegians, who volunteered their services to Superintendent of Elections McCullagh. One of the young men is said to be a millionaire. Another is a young physician, and the four remaining are medical students. They claim to have made themselves noticeable around West Twenty-sixth street just before election day. Disguised as tramps they were accosted by workers who, after becoming acquainted, disposed of them in various ways. On election day they say they were provided with slips bearing the names of men who had registered in good faith, but who had been called away. In this manner they say they voted many times apiece, and for each ballot they allege they received $3. Superintendent McCullagh's deputies at the polls were aware of their movements, and the ballots are said to have been marked for identification. The plan came near ending disastrously in one booth where the alleged "repeater" had been provided by mistake with a slip bearing the name of a negro.

The exposures have caused a sensation among the politicians of the district, as the officials claim their agents were admitted to the clubs and availed themselves of every opportunity for collecting information.

HOME FROM EUROPE.
S. F. Bowser returned last evening from a three months' trip abroad in the interest of S. F. Bowser & Co. Mr. Bowser was accompanied by Ross McClellan, who will remain in England until spring, and visited many points of interest on the continent and in Britain. Mr. Bowser states that the business outlook is excellent and that he expects to have a number of agents abroad next year.

HOTEL IN QUARANTINE.
Waterloo, Ind., Nov. 15.—The Locke hotel, the most prominent in this place, is closed under quarantine on account of smallpox. The proprietor, Ab Kelly, is a victim of the disease, and rigid restrictions have been thrown about the house. There are now ten or twelve cases of smallpox in Waterloo.

FARM HOUSE IS BURNED.
The residence occupied by Isaac Forsythe, in Abbot township, was totally destroyed by fire last Saturday evening, while the members of the family were absent attending church. The blaze originated from a defective chimney, and neighbors who saw the flames were able to save a small portion of the household effects. The residence was owned by Dr. Geary, of Coesee, and the loss will be about $400.

HAD A BANQUET.

No. 19, Pathfinders, had an interesting meeting last evening, followed by a banquet at which there were 300 participants. Fifty or sixty people from Huntington were in attendance, making the trip to and from the city on a special interurban car. Before the social session, a class of seventeen applicants were initiated into the order.

YALE FAR IN LEAD

PLAYING ANNUAL GAME IN PRINCETON.

SONS OF OLD ELI STRONG

TIGERS UNABLE TO STAND UP AGAINST ONSLAUGHT.

IMMENSE CROWD PRESENT

SCORE FIRST HALF IS YALE, 12 PRINCETON, 5.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 15.—Princeton and Yale will meet this afternoon on Old Nassau field in their annual football game.

The score at the end of the first half was:

Yale, 12.
Princeton, 5.

No foot ball contest of the year is fraught with so great interest. This fact was made apparent early yesterday when advance guards of graduates and friends of the teams began arriving. This transient traffic continued until the last train at night and began again on the first train this morning.

Princeton is in gala attire for the occasion. All places of business are bedecked with the colors of the two universities and there is scarcely a dwelling, from the handsomest mansion to the humblest cottage, that does not fly either the blue or orange and black. The day broke cloudy and with an almost impenetrable fog hanging over the town and surrounding country. Toward 10 o'clock, however, the fog lifted and the sun peeped through the quickly disappearing clouds. There was a light breeze from the south and the weather was almost too warm for the comfort of the young giants who faced each other at 2 o'clock. The Princeton team rested at the club house, close to the field, last night. The players were up early and seemed to be in the pink of condition. The Yale eleven reached here at noon from New York and went at once to the club house, where the players remained until time to make appearance. Trainer Murphy said all the players were in fine condition with the exception of Left End Rafferty and Captain Chadwick. The latter is a little finely drawn and Rafferty has a bad bruise on his head, compelling him to wear a bandage.

It is estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 persons will witness the game.

Matthew McCullagh, jr., of Lehigh, is referee, and Paul J. Dashiell, of Lehigh, is umpire.

THE LINE-UP OF TEAMS.

The teams will line up as follows:

| Princeton. | Position.      | Yale.    |
|------------|----------------|----------|
| Davis      | Left end       | Rafferty |
| Brown      | Left tackle    | Kinney   |
| Bradley    | Left guard     | Glass    |
| Short      | Center         | Heit     |
| DeWitt     | Right guard    | Goss     |
| Reed       | Right tackle   | Hogan    |
| Henry      | Right end      | Sheelin  |
| Pearson    | Quarterback    | Rockwell |
| Hart       | Left halfback  | Chadwick |
| Foulke     | Right halfback | Metcalfe |
| R. McClave | Fullback       | Bowman   |

The crowds began to enter the grounds as early as 12 o'clock, scores of spectators having brought their lunches to the grounds. Half an hour before the time to begin, 2 p. m., there was scarcely a vacant seat in the huge amphitheater.

THE WEATHER IDEAL.

The weather was ideal for the great crowd of on-lookers, but a trifle too warm for the players. There was a light breeze blowing directly across the field, but this was to the advantage of neither team.

At 2 o'clock the Yale team trotted into the field. Three minutes later the Princeton eleven came on, headed by Jim Robinson, carrying the pet tiger in a cage.

Princeton won the toss and chose to defend the south goal, and at 2:15 o'clock the game began, Bowman kicking off for Yale.

After five minutes of play Yale fumbled and Pearson getting the ball for Princeton, carried it fifteen yards to Yale's 35-yard line. DeWitt dropped immediately and made a beautiful try for a goal from the field, missing by less than five feet.

PRINCETON'S FIRST GOAL.

DeWitt kicked a goal from the 45-yard line. Score—Princeton, 5; Yale, 0.

Chadwick got the ball for Yale in mid-field and ran fifty-two yards for a touchdown. Score—Princeton, 5; Yale, 5.

Bowman kicked the goal for Yale. Score—Princeton, 5; Yale, 6.

The game progressed from this point with little advantage for either side. Both Yale and Princeton suffered penalties for off-side and holding. DeWitt, Princeton's great kicker, was hurt twice and the game was delayed while he recovered.

Princeton got the ball for holding on Yale's 23-yard line.

On the next play Princeton lost the ball for holding.

Yale had the ball on her own 30-yard line and worked desperately to advance it. Princeton was holding finely, yet Yale was able to carry the ball 23 yards by straight line plunges.

With the ball in Yale's possession on Princeton's 45-yard line there was a respite while the damage inflicted on two or three players was repaired.

Then they went at it again and Yale lost the ball for holding on Princeton's 40-yard line. A fake kick gained five yards for Princeton.

This advantage was almost entirely lost on the next line-up and DeWitt was called upon for a punt. Metcalfe caught the ball on Yale's 25-yard line and carried it back 18 yards before he was downed.

YALE'S SECOND GOAL.

Chadwick got through and carried the ball sixty yards for a touchdown. Score: Yale, 11; Princeton, 5.

Bowman kicked the goal. Score: Yale, 12; Princeton, 5.

DeWitt kicked off to Yale's 5-yard line. The ball was carried back 20 yards.

Line plunges advanced the ball to the center of the field, Princeton not being able to withstand the heavy rushes of her opponent.

An injury to R. McClave caused a delay of several minutes. When play was resumed Princeton held better and forced Yale to kick. Pearson caught the ball for Princeton and was downed on Princeton's 25-yard line. Princeton returned the kick and it was Yale's ball in mid-field.

First half over, 3:22 p. m. Yale tried an end run and lost four yards. This forced a kick and at this moment the first half ended with the ball in Princeton's possession on her own 20-yard line.

Score First half—Yale, 12; Princeton, 5.

The team lined up for the second half at 3:35 o'clock, Tooker replacing Henry at right end for Princeton. There was no change in Yale's line-up.

CHICAGO MEETS MICHIGAN.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—For the eleventh time since 1892 two teams, Michigan and Chicago, which always play their most desperate foot ball against each other, met today on Marshall field.

The betting before the game was much in favor of the Wolverines. Even money was freely offered that Chicago would not score and that Michigan would win by twenty points or more. One Michigan man offered odds that Chicago would not have the ball inside Michigan's fifteen-yard line and his money went like a flash.

In general figuring was on the size of Michigan's score, although by no means did the Maroons lack supporters who looked for victory and covered the tempting bets of the maize and blue followers.

The day was ideal for the game, being sufficiently cool for overcoats for the first time during a game this season.

The line-up:

| Michigan  | Position       | Chicago   |
|-----------|----------------|-----------|
| Redden    | left end       | Speik     |
| Palmer    | left tackle    | Kochler   |
| McGugin   | left guard     | Ahlsweide |
| McGugin   | center         | Ellsworth |
| Carter    | right guard    | Maxwell   |
| McDuck    | right tackle   | Farr      |
| Sweeney   | right end      | Catlin    |
| Weeks     | quarterback    | Sheldon   |
| Heston    | left halfback  | Schnurr   |
| Hervstein | right halfback | Bezdek    |

Umpire, Starbuck, of Cornell; referee, Beechman, of Cornell.

There were between 8,000 and 10,000 people in the grounds when the game began.

Michigan won the toss.

After long and hard play Sweeney kicked a goal from field. Score: Michigan, 5; Chicago, 0.

Heston ran down the field for a touchdown. Score: Michigan, 10; Chicago, 0.

Score end first half: Michigan, 10; Chicago, 0.

FIRES AT LEOPOLD

ANARCHIST SEEKS LIFE OF BELGIAN KING.

THREE SHOTS ARE SENT WILD

ATTEMPT ON MONARCH'S LIFE

STIRS THE PEOPLE.

POLICE PROTECT ASSAILANT

MAN, AN ITALIAN ANARCHIST, ADMITS PURPOSE.

Brussels, Nov. 15.—Three shots were fired at the king of the Belgians this morning as he was proceeding to the cathedral to attend a te deum in memory of the late Queen Marie Henriette. No one was hurt.

The man who fired the shots is an Italian. He stood in front of the Bank of Brussels on the Rue Royale. The other cartridges in his revolver proved to be blank, so it is presumed that those fired were equally harmless. The man was immediately arrested and the police had some difficulty in rescuing him from the hands of the crowd. He gave the name of Rubino.

The royal cortege consisted of several carriages besides that of the king, containing the count and countess of Flanders, Prince and Princess Albert of Flanders, the Princess Clementine and ladies-in-waiting.

Rubino is a bookkeeper. He was born at Binardo near Naples, in 1859, and has lately lived in Brussels.

MAN IS AN ANARCHIST.

When examined by the police Rubino confessed that he intended to shoot King Leopold and said he held anarchist beliefs.

A fuller investigation satisfied the police that Rubino really fired a ball cartridge, the bullet of which smashed the window of Comte D'Oultremont's carriage and grazed the grand marshal's face.

When rescued from the mob Rubino was placed in a cab and infuriated crowds of people immediately surrounded it and attacked the vehicle with knives and sticks. The police had great difficulty in forcing a way to the police station through the crowd, which shouted alternately: "Kill him!" and "Long live the king!" The cab was badly hacked with knives.

A search of the prisoner revealed a package of ball cartridges.

PLANNED TO MURDER KING.

It is reported that Rubino had been heard to express anarchist opinions and it was also said that he came to Brussels from London expressly to kill King Leopold and went to the cathedral today for this purpose, but refrained from shooting at the king for fear of killing soldiers who stood between him and his majesty.

Rubino is also reported to have said he was employed in the Italian secret service in London and that he came to Brussels a fortnight ago with the intention of assassinating King Leopold.

The news of the outrage spread rapidly throughout the city and the greatest excitement prevailed. The people thronged the streets, eagerly discussing the attempt on the life of the king, and large crowds gathered in front of the various bulletin boards. The newspapers issued frequent editions and these were eagerly bought. General abstinence was expressed by the people at the apparently deliberate attempt to assassinate the sovereign.

King Leopold appeared to be quite unmoved by the attempt of Rubino to kill him. After luncheon at the palace his majesty entered a motor car and proceeded to the railroad station, where he boarded a train bound for Groenendael.

WALLS' SLAYER IS INDICTED

VAN WERT GRAND JURY RETURNS ITS FINDING.

John Wanamaker, of Dixon, Must Stand Trial for Murder in the First Degree.

John Wanamaker, who killed William Walls with an ax at Dixon, a little town on the eastern line of Allen county, must stand trial for murder in the first degree. The grand jury at Van Wert yesterday returned an indictment formally charging Wanamaker with the crime.

Readers of The Sentinel will remember that on the night of July 5, after having attended a dance at Dixon, Wanamaker and Walls had a quarrel, in which the former threatened Walls' life. At 11:30 o'clock Walls and two companions passed Wanamaker seated upon a storebox upon the main street of the village. Walls made a remark which further angered Wanamaker and the latter, seizing an ax which he had concealed beneath the box, leaped to his feet and struck Walls a terrific blow upon the head with the ax, knocking him senseless to the ground. Two other blows followed as his victim lay upon the ground. Walls' skull was crushed and he died almost immediately.

After his bloody work Wanamaker spent the night in a barn and then started for Van Wert to give himself up. Upon the road he met the sheriff, who took him in charge. The Ohio authorities had jurisdiction from the fact that the bloody affair occurred on the Ohio side of the street. Wanamaker was held without bail and has been confined in the Van Wert jail since the murder.

D., president of the University of Chicago, and Nicholas Murray Butler, LL. D., president of Columbia university. President Swain concluded the formal exercises with his inaugural address.

DESTRUCTION IS APPALLING

DESCRIBED AS WORSE THAN THAT ON MARTINIQUE.

PLANTATIONS WIPED AWAY

HAVOC IS WIDESPREAD AND COMPLETE.

New York, Nov. 15.—Astonishing revelations of great loss of life and property caused by the eruption of the Santa Maria volcano are being made daily, says a cablegram to the Herald from Guatemala City under date of Nov. 9, transmitted by way of San Salvador. Eruptions continue.

Many hundreds of human beings perished and the destruction of property is considered greater than that in the island of Martinique by the eruptions of Mont Pelee.

All of the estates in the neighborhood of the volcano are buried under volcanic ashes, which reach to the tops of houses.

The richest coffee estates are completely ruined. The principal losses are the large coffee planters, mostly United States citizens and Germans, whose properties are ruined.

Two or three new craters have been formed on the side of the volcano. There were no eruptions from the summit. Pumice and ashes were carried chiefly in the southern and western directions. The sea has a coating of volcanic material extending for many miles.

The loss of the coffee crop, which is Guatemala's principal export, has completely demoralized commerce and the government finances generally.

The national paper currency, which is the only circulating medium, has fallen to seven cents gold for one paper dollar.

Prices for all necessities have risen to a prohibitive figure for many persons. The authorities are trying to force the dealers to sell goods at the usual prices, but the condition of affairs is such that business is entirely paralyzed. Violently worded handbills and posters are being circulated.

COL. J. W. WHITAKER NO MORE

WELL KNOWN VETERAN DIES
AT ADVANCED AGE.

Was a Pioneer of Allen County and the Comrade of Lawton—Other Mortuary Matters.

Col. Joseph W. Whitaker, a pioneer resident of Allen county, prominent as citizen and soldier and a comrade of the late General Lawton, died at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening at his home, 2118 South Calhoun street, Colonel Whitaker was more than 81 years of age, and had been in failing health for some time.

It is sixty-seven years since Col. Whitaker, then a sturdy young farmer, came to Allen county, and with the exception of six years spent in gold-seeking in California, had resided in the county continuously since that time. He was a native of Indiana, born in Dearborn county, January 10, 1821. When but fourteen years of age he came to Allen county and spent ten months in assisting to clear up and improve a tract of land in Marion township, ten miles southeast of Fort Wayne, which had been entered a short time previously by his father, Daniel Whitaker. At the end of this time the entire family moved from Dearborn county to their new home, and Mr. Whitaker's parents spent the remainder of their lives there.

WAS A FORTY-NINER.

In December, 1837, the young man came to Fort Wayne and entered himself as an apprentice under John Fairfield to learn the blacksmith trade. This he completed in four years, and then for several years was employed as a journeyman in various parts of the county. Shortly after the discovery of gold in California in 1849, Mr. Whitaker joined the pilgrimage westward, making the long journey overland to California, requiring one hundred days in the trip. For six years, with varying success, he engaged in mining operations in California, then turned his face eastward again, returning home by way of the Isthmus of Panama and New York.

Returning to Fort Wayne he embarked in the blacksmithing business until 1859, when he removed to New Haven and opened a shop there.

ENTERED THE ARMY.

With the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Whitaker promptly tendered his services to his country, enlisting as captain of company D, Thirtieth Indiana volunteers. This was on September 21, 1861, and his first service ended three years later, after he had led his command in the battles of Shiloh, Stone River, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge and through the Atlanta campaign. He was mustered out at Indianapolis September 29, 1864, and in the February following he re-entered the service as a recruiting officer. He was mustered into the service as lieutenant colonel of the 182nd Indiana regiment, serving with honor until the close of the war. He was discharged at Charleston, W. Va., August 30, 1865. Returning to New Haven Colonel Whitaker embarked in mercantile pursuits, remaining in business until 1885, when he retired. He served as postmaster at New Haven for ten years, receiving the appointment in 1875.

LEAVES WIDOW AND SON.

Colonel Whitaker was united in marriage March 5, 1846, to Miss Susan DeVese, who, with one son, survives. The son is Eugene Whitaker, ticket agent of the Nickel Plate railroad at New Haven. Colonel Whitaker and his wife removed to Fort Wayne but a few years ago to pass their declining days.

Politically Mr. Whitaker was a Republican, and he was active in support of his faith for many years. He was a vigorous, upright citizen of loftiest character and integrity, very widely known and personally popular, and was for many years easily one of the foremost citizens of the county. He was a Mason, an Odd Fellow and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and took an active interest in all these organizations so long as his health permitted. Countless friends and acquaintances will mourn the death of this admirable citizen and sturdy patriot.

The funeral services will be held from the residence in this city Monday at 12:30 o'clock, and it is expected that Rev. Lang, of Joliet, Ill., a Universalist minister, will officiate. The interment will occur in the I. O. O. F. cemetery at New Haven. All the fraternal societies to which Colonel Whitaker belonged will have a part in the services. Wayne lodge, F. and A. M., will conduct its ritualistic services at the residence, and the New Haven lodge of Odd Fellows and Lawton Post, G. A. R., will perform the ceremonies at the grave.

WESTERMAN.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Westerman, wife of William C. Westerman, died Friday afternoon at her home, 1230 East Lewis street, after an illness of two days from lung fever. Mrs. Westerman was 67 years of age.

many, coming with her husband to America about twenty years ago, and had resided in this city continuously since that time. Mrs. Westerman was a devoted member of St. Paul's Lutheran church, and a most estimable woman. Surviving are the husband and five children—William, Herman, Fred and Karl Westerman and Mrs. Fred Menze.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence and at 2:30 from St. Paul's Lutheran church.

MALPRACTICE SUIT BEGUN

MAY VAN BUSKIRK SUES DR. JOHN KANDEL.

Asks for $4,000 Damages for Injuries Alleged as Result of an Operation.

May Van Buskirk, a niece of Dr. A. E. Van Buskirk, today commenced suit against Dr. John Kandel for damages in the sum of $4,000. The suit is for alleged malpractice resulting in a delicate operation to which the plaintiff submitted, Dr. Kandel being the operator. The complaint, which is quite lengthy, was penned by Colerick & Thomas and sets out that in the operation a mistake was made and that while a part of the diseased organ only was removed, all of a healthy companion was cut out and that the result has been distressing and that abscesses and ulcers have formed which would not have been the case had the operation been properly and skillfully performed.

WANTS A DIVORCE.

Josephine Hathaway filed an application for divorce from John Hathaway and asks for alimony in the sum of $500 and the custody of a minor child. She also asked for an order restraining the defendant from visiting her or in any way interfering with her or intruding upon her presence at her home near the county farm. Judge Aiken issued the injunction and service was made by the sheriff this afternoon. The parties were married in 1837 and the issue of their marriage was ten children, two of whom are dead. The complaint alleges that from the day of their marriage defendant neglected her and abandoned her times without number; that he has failed to provide for her, is an habitual drunkard and is often cruel and abusive. Furthermore she states that although he is an able-bodied man he draws a pension from the government of $120 per year and has for a specified number of years and that all she ever received from said pension aggregated $450.

COURT NOTES.

George W. Zeigler, bound over by Justice France yesterday to answer to a charge of grand larceny preferred by his young wife, was released from jail this morning. His bond was fixed at $1,500, for which sum Charles Pope became surety.

John Murphy was some time ago adjudged of unsound mind and being possessed of some property a guardian was appointed for him. Since then he has been cured of his malady and today Michael Singleton made application to have him declared of sound mind and capable of managing his own estate. The petition is filed in the circuit court.

Solomon B. Stouder has commenced suit against Maggie Vegaleus et al. on a note for $130.

The circuit court will commence the November term next Monday. The grand jury will not be called until a week later.

Henrika Fuhrman sues John Fuhrman for divorce and alimony in the sum of $2,000. The complaint alleges that they were married in 1898 and that the defendant abandoned her more than three years ago, since which time they have lived separate. Defendant has property valued at $4,000 and the plaintiff alleges that she should be entitled to at least $2,000.

THAT BEAR HUNT

LITTLE NEWS LEARNED OF THE PRESIDENT.

HE IS DEEP IN THE WOODS

SUPPOSED TO BE AGAIN ON THE TRAIL.

ONE BEAR ROPED AND SLAIN

PRESIDENT REFUSED A SHOT

AT CAPTIVE ANIMAL.

Smedes, Miss., Nov. 15.—Although no direct message had arrived from the camp on the Little Sunflower at 9 o'clock this morning, word drifted back during the night in the quick, but mysterious fashion peculiar to the transmission of information through negro channels in the south, that the president reached camp shortly after dark last night, but with it came no word of the result of the chase after the second bear. Rain drizzled at intervals during the night and this morning curtains of gray mist descended from the low, leaden skies. Smedes was dismal beyond description. It was simply a cotton field covered and shut in by walls of mist and by a railroad track. The presidential train and the box car telegraph office on the siding, the plantation store and a single white-washed negro cabin in the center of the expanse of cotton comprised a complete inventory of the view from the signboard labeled "Smedes."

A downpour was expected at any minute. Notwithstanding the threatening weather, it was assumed here that the presidential party was off at daybreak.

Mr. Stevens arrived from camp shortly after 10 o'clock with the information that the second bear followed by the hounds yesterday afternoon turned out to be a small cub and the dogs had killed it before the president and the party got up.

Mr. Stevens said that the president and Holt Collier were off at daybreak this morning. Toward noon the sun burned up the mist and the heat became excessive, even for this late season of the year, the thermometer standing at 78 Fahrenheit.

ROPED THEN KILLED.

A lean, black bear, weighing 255 pounds, is hanging up at the president's camp on the Little Sunflower, the first fruit of the chase since the president came here, but to the regret of all the members of the party the first trophy of the hunt did not fall to the presidential rifle. Hoke Collier roped the bear after it was brought to bay, tied it to a tree and sent for the president, who refused the shot and ordered the animal's throat cut.

The bear's trail was struck by the hounds soon after the party started this morning. All except the president, Mr. Foote, Mr. Parker and Hoke Collier had been stationed at the various crossings and as soon as the dogs gave tongue the president and his guides plunged through the dense underbrush in pursuit. Within a few minutes the dogs showed the direction, bruin was taking and Collier, with the instinct of an old bear hunter, made up his mind where the animal would come out.

To save the president needless hard riding through the brush Collier directed Mr. Foote to take him along the trail to a certain cut-off. On their way several swamp deer were started, but no effort was made to get a shot at them.

PRESIDENT MISSES CHANCE.

These eminent gentlemen have decided to give their services entirely free for three months (medicines excepted) to all invalids who call upon them for treatment between now and December 31. These services consist not only of consultation, examination and advice, but also of all minor surgical operations.

The object in passing this course is to become rapidly and personally acquainted with the sick and afflicted, and under conditions will any charge whatever be made for any services rendered for three months, to all who call before Dec. 31.

The doctors treat all forms of disease and ailments, and guarantee a cure in every case they undertake. At the first interview a thorough examination is made, and if incurable, you are frankly and kindly told so; also advised against spending your money for useless treatment.

Male and female weakness, catarrh and catarrhal diseases, also rupture, gonorrhea, cancer, all blood and skin diseases, all diseases of the rectum and the drug habits are positively cured by their new treatment. The chief associate surgeon of the Institute is in personal charge. Office hours from 9 to 12, 2 to 5 and 7 to 9.

Her Life Might Have Been Saved

Two-thirds of the inmates of our hospitals are women. They are in most cases either for treatment or for an operation, made necessary by advanced stages of female troubles which have resulted in ovaritis, a tumor, or displacement of the womb.

"AN OPERATION NECESSARY."

How these words after the examination strike terror to a woman's soul, and with what regrets she hears them, when she considers that the operation has become necessary through her own neglect. Female derangements cannot cure themselves, and neglecting the warnings of nature only means putting it off until there is no cure. The woman who lets her trouble make headway pays the penalty of a dangerous operation and a lifetime of impaired usefulness at the best, and the operation often proves fatal when her life might have been saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration; or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, and the blues, they should remember that there is one tried and never-failing remedy; Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound at once removes such troubles.

READ THE FOLLOWING LETTERS.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot tell you how much good you have done me and how thankful I am to you for it. For five years I have not been free from pain for a day. I have had backaches, headaches, and those awful dragging sensations with leucorrhœa, and when menstruation appeared I was in such a condition I could hardly sit up. I doctored all the time, but nothing helped me, and I was told that an operation was necessary."

"Two months ago a friend suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No one knows what it has done for me and how thankful I am for it. It brought me the first well days I have had for five years. It did for me what doctors could not do, and I want every suffering woman to know about it."—LOUISE NAYER, 751 E. 100th St., New York City.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had terrible hemorrhages, being lacerated from the birth of my child. The doctor told me that if I would have an operation I would be well and strong. I submitted to it, but was worse than before; no one knows what I suffered. Finally a friend advised me to try your Vegetable Compound; I did so, and commenced to feel better. I continued its use, and it has done for me what doctors could not do. I am strong and well. If women with any kind of female troubles would only consult you before submitting to an operation they would be spared many hours of pain and suffering. I cannot thank you enough for what you have done for me."—ANNA KIRCHHOFF, 156 E. 100th St., New York City.

The trail of the bear carried the yelping hounds out of hearing and shortly after noon Mr. Foote abandoned hope that the quarry would come back their way, so he and the president returned to camp for luncheon. Had they remained the president would have had a shot, as the bear, with a pack at its heels, crossed at almost the exact spot where Hoke had indicated.

ABOUT THE CITY HALL.

It is rather shocking, to be sure, but the indications now are that the long expected, much deferred starting of the new pump at No. 2 pumping station will not be consummated today. The heavy rains of yesterday and the juvenile cloudburst last night contributed their little mite to the other circumstances which are responsible for the delay.

Falling Hair Stopped

I had trichophagia, a disease of the scalp, which was very annoying. My hair was falling out, and my head was itching. I had tried many remedies, but nothing helped me. I then tried the Newbros' Hairdressing, and the doctor strongly recommended it to me. After three or four applications my hair stopped falling out, and is coming in again quite thick. I feel that I am now quite cured, so you see I have cause to praise Newbros' Hairdressing.

WAYNE DRY GOODS CO.

Formerly of the Old Retail Store of Geo. DeWald & Co.

Our Suit and Cloak Department is making a name for itself for the Beautiful Styles and Perfect Fit of the Special orders it furnishes, which we have indeed reason to be proud of.

This is not what some might call an advertising exaggeration, for we believe that we can safely claim that we have delivered more fine, special order garments, requiring less alteration, than any other house in the state.

"I am delighted with it," "I was never more pleased with a suit," "This is the first time I ever gave an order of this kind with results so satisfactory in every particular."

The above are the common expressions heard from the patrons of our suit and cloak department.

If they are pleased, you can depend upon it that we are. To please is our first consideration, for we know this is the secret of success.

If you wish a Suit or Cloak, the wearing of which will class you among—not the ordinary well dressed—but the especially well dressed, it is the styles that we have the exclusive sale of in this city that you will buy.

With the desire to earn and be entitled to the reputation of carrying just as superior a quality of Furs and Fur Garments, we offer the production of one of the largest manufacturers in this line in the country—whose goods we know, not only from reputation, but also from experience, to be all that we claim for them.

Their work for us this season on several special orders for real Seal Garments has been beautiful and elegant specimens of the superiority of the goods they turn out.

We are positive that for anything you may wish in Fine Furs we can suit you in quality and save you money.

Have you seen the qualities of Fancy Silks, retail price of which have been from $1.00 to $1.25, offered by us this week at 57c a yard? They are bargains that will not last long.

LARGER THAN EXPECTED.

Wabash, Ind., Nov. 15.—Expert Gribben, who was engaged by the city council to make an examination of the accounts of John B. Rose, treasurer of the city of Wabash, completed his work last night and submitted his report to the finance committee of the council and some of the bondsmen. The result of the investigation is a surprise, as it increases the amount of the shortage to $13,102, or about $2,200 more than was originally reported. The report shows discrepancies in the cash on hand, the sum credited almost at the beginning of his first term and continuing down to the last year of his second term. Omissions of entries occurred and it was with difficulty, the expert said, that he could ascertain the true shortage. In many instances warrants were totally missing. The bondsmen will hold a meeting next week and will employ an accountant to go over the figures and verify the same. There is an impression that Rose is entitled to some credits which do not appear and which will reduce the amount alleged to be due. The bondsmen have received in property and cash about $9,500, leaving the net loss they will sustain about $3,500 if the expert's figures are correct.

SEEK MISSING BROTHER.

Loran D. Ward, traveling representative of the Berghoff Brewing company, living at 1317 Hanna street, is at Bay City, Mich., where he went Thursday to attend at the bedside of his brother, Cuyler T. Ward, who is dying or dead at 1310 Garfield avenue. A third brother, William S. Ward, formerly lived in Detroit, but left that city last January to reside with his daughter, who lives in New York city. The daughter, Nina, was married to a man named Herbert Huntley, from whom she has been divorced, and her address, and consequently her father's, is not known to the other relatives. The Bay City brother was stricken with paralysis and in order that William might be notified of his brother's precarious condition Loran Ward, of this city, telegraphed the New York police department to locate him if possible. The institution of the inquiry reached the police reporters of the metropolitan papers, but nothing was known there why the inquiry was being made. The reporters sniffed a sensation and for awhile the wires between Fort Wayne and New York were kept pretty hot and local correspondents chased themselves round and round.

REV. OSTROM CANNOT COME.

Rev. Henry Ostrom, D. D., of Greencastle, Ind., who was to have conducted a series of union meetings in this city during January, under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal churches, has notified Chairman J. K. Walts, of the arrangements committee, that he will be unable to come. It is probable that arrangements will be made to have him come later.

SCHOOL TEACHERS LEARN

Just Like Other People.

Bad food and overwork wreck many a life, but the right food makes sure and complete happiness, for one must be happy if perfectly well.
"Grape-Nuts saved my life, and changed me from a nervous, sick, despondent woman to a healthy, strong and cheerful one," writes Mrs. Alice Riegel, of Pontiac, Ill. "I had not been well for several years and I thought, as did my friends, that 'my days were numbered.' My ill health was caused from drinking coffee, eating improper food and overwork in the schoolroom; I had become very weak, tired and nervous and nothing I ate agreed with me. Medicine made me more nervous and impaired my digestive organs.
It was with difficulty that a neighbor induced me to try Grape-Nuts and I liked it from the first with thick cream and sugar. I lived on it exclusively with Postum Food Coffee until my digestion was so much improved I could eat other foods. My friends soon noticed the improvement in my looks, and I am now healthy, strong and happy. I attribute the change in my health solely to the change in diet.
Husband and I both like Grape-Nuts and Postum. I think they are the most healthful and strengthening of all foods and drinks and suitable for the weak as well as the strong."

THE OAKDALE,

The Only Stove Made that is Adapted to Burning Coal or Wood and Gas at the Same time.

The burner forms a circle around the outer portion of the fire pot. The gas orifices are located above the grate line and under a circular projecting flange, thus preventing the clogging up of the burner. By this arrangement the burner does not interfere with the grates or fire pot, and coal, wood or gas can be used, either separately or together, without the change or addition of a single piece. When the gas supply is low you can burn all the gas you can get and at the same time you can burn wood or coal as a supplementary fuel, or you can shut off the gas and the stove is instantly ready for coal or wood.

According to accounts bear-hunting in Mississippi is much like what a bear-hunt in a zoological garden would be.

It is now announced that Indiana has become the second state of the union in the production of red liquor. This may account for the fact that Indiana's corn crop this year is 100 per cent. bigger than last year's crop. State pride, however, will continue to center in the corn crop.

President Roosevelt has the true instincts of a sportsman. He declined to shoot a bear after the animal had been "roped" for him. The quarrel game was then put to death in a la parking house. That is to say, it was knocked on the head and its throat cut. There does not appear to be anything particularly strenuous about a Mississippi bar hunt.

The Pennsylvania railroad company treats employees fairly and on the broad ground that if higher wages are due them it is not necessary to have trouble before making the increase. The result of such a high-minded policy is bound to be always satisfactory both to the great railway corporation and its employees. It averts strikes, conduces to perfectly cordial relations and commands the hearty co-operation of the men in all things which make for the railroad's prosperity.

Governor Durbin's friends in Indianapolis now take occasion to deny that the state's executive is ambitious to be vice president. It may well be assumed that so good a politician as Governor Durbin knows well enough that the running mate for President Roosevelt will be a man of the president's own selection and there is considerable doubt if the governor would be that man. It is more likely to be Beveridge, if an Indiana man is thought well of for the place, and in that case the governor would have a clearer field to try for the thing which doubtless he really wants—to wit, the toga Senator Beveridge now so nicely adorns.

"You'll have to show me," is an expression from Missouri. It means that if you want a Missourian to believe your statements you must make demonstration of their truth. Usually the demonstration, when made, compels belief. At any rate, the results of the prosecution of half a dozen bribers and bootlers, among them some very rich men, go far to prove that when a Missouri jury has been "shown" the sequel is bound to be very satisfying to the common sense of justice. For instance, there are communities in this land where the fact that Ed Butler, king of the bootlers and leader in politics, was a millionaire and a powerful politician would have had so much weight that his conviction would have been all but impossible. A Missouri jury sends him to the penitentiary. The effect of this is likely to be in some degree salutary in places not in Missouri.

The wage increase just announced by the Pennsylvania railroad company, will have the effect of distributing some $17,000 more cash per month among its employees in Fort Wayne. Just what this means to the prosperity of Fort Wayne may not be fully appreciated by everyone. It is a fact, nevertheless, that it will mean much. The additional wages to be distributed in Fort Wayne would be equal to the average wages of more than 350 men receiving an average of $2 per day. If it were announced that Fort Wayne had opportunity to secure a manufacturing institution that would employ 350 men at average wages of $2 per day, there would be very lively interest in the prospect and some readiness, no doubt, to give something in the way of bonus to secure it. The big addition to the wage earnings of the Pennsylvania company here is important and the city in a hundred ways will derive benefit from it.

INDIANA AS A WHISKY STATE.

Indianapolis, Nov. 15.—Indiana now stands second among the states in the distilling of spirits for whisky. Illinois is first, but Indiana is not far behind. Ambrose E. Nowlin, chief revenue collector for the Lawrenceburg district, which includes fifty-nine counties, who was here yesterday, said there has been a big growth of the spirit-distilling business in Indiana during the last few years. There are several of the largest distilleries of the country in Indiana. One was erected recently at Hammond that turns out several hundred thousand gallons a year. There are several large distilleries at Lawrenceburg and Terre Haute. In Mr. Nowlin's district alone the revenue from the distilleries amounts annually to about $10,000,000. The revenue from the Terre Haute district, of which John Bonnell is collector, is over $15,000,000 from the distillers. Mr. Nowlin said that the reduction of the revenue by congress has cut off over $30,000,000 of the annual receipts in this state.

WILL HAVE POLO TEAM.

Manager Eckert, of the Princess rink, will have a strong semi-professional polo team this season and will select his players about December 1, when practice will begin. Mr. Eckert was refused admittance to the Western Polo league, composed of cities in northern Indiana, because of his refusal to cut down the skating surface of Princess rink by about a half, but he will have several of the league teams here during the winter on off dates. Princess rink will be opened for roller skating this

IN POPULAR FAVOR

OVER TWO HUNDRED TELL OF THE MERITS OF RUNDLELL'S RHEUMATIC CURE.

Manufacturers Have Novel Display on Today at Pellens & Polster's Drug Store.

The Rundell Preparatory company has on display today in the north window of Pellens & Polster's drug store, a line of its medicine—"Rundell's Rheumatic Cure." The window is arranged with a background of potted plants and ferns. Mr. Will A. Rundell, the advertising manager, hit upon the scheme to show to the people just what his company's goods are. In the center of hundreds of packages of the medicine is a bit of feature advertising that has aroused many a laugh. It is an illustration of an officer arresting "Happy," a tramp. In the corner shows "Happy" in a prison cell. This is "Happy's" strong testimonial of Rundell's Rheumatic Cure: "I took two bottles of Rundell's Rheumatic Cure and have worked every day since."

The window throughout is bright and snappy, and betrays that a great deal of hard work has been done by the firm to make the medicine go. The fact that the firm has been in business continually for ten years, suggests that there must be merit, or else the medicine would not have the thousands of staunch friends that it has today. Advertising will make acquaintances, but no amount of advertising will make friends. The people of this day and age believe in the Missourian's prerogative, and when the goods are up to the standard then the success is assured.

The manufacturers of Rundell's Rheumatic Cure are Messrs. Martin E. Rundell and Will A. Rundell, doing business under the firm name of the Rundell Proprietary Co. The firm has been manufacturing the remedy since 1892, but have only recently placed it upon the open market. They have in their possession over two hundred testimonials from Allen county alone, covering rheumatism in all its forms, from one week to sixteen years' duration. Their medicine is manufactured upon principles heretofore never used, and claim it is the only rheumatism cure upon the market which does not contain any ingredients harmful to the stomach or other organs. Every druggist in Fort Wayne will issue a certificate to the effect that if Rundell's Rheumatic Cure fails to cure, he will refund your money.

The Fort Wayne Drug Co. is their local distributing agents.

SORE HEADS THE RESULT

A RIOT IN HARTFORD CITY OVER TROLLEY POLES.

Citizens Attempt to Stop Work on the Muncie, Hartford City and Fort Wayne Line.

Hartford City, Ind., Nov. 15.—The property owners on the east side of the public square, officers and the workmen of the Chase Construction company, building the Muncie, Hartford City and Fort Wayne interurban line, participated in a riot here yesterday afternoon, and there are several battered faces and sore heads as the result.

The trouble was due to the company placing large and unsightly wooden trolley poles in front of the doors of several of the business houses instead of iron poles. The property owners banded together for the purpose of stopping the work long enough to have an attorney investigate the right of the company to tear up the sidewalk and place the poles in the walk. The work had been begun and the city officers pushed the workmen back and stood in the uncompleted holes. A man was stationed at each of the holes, while an attorney read the franchise.

The attorney was slow in making up his mind and about twenty of the construction gang got together and made a "V" rush on the city marshal and pushed him away, while the rest of the workers reopened the work. Citizens took a hand, and a free-for-all fight ensued, in which the construction gang was slightly worsted.

A big crowd gathered on the disputed territory and the sentiment of the crowd seemed to be against the company, as the poles had been erected in other parts of the city under protest from property owners. After the battle the investigating attorney sent word that if the company's franchise is valid—but he believes it is not—the company has the right to place the poles. When this word reached the workers the poles were placed in position, but further trouble is expected.

SOUSA PLANNING WORLD TOUR.

Washington, Nov. 15.—John Philip Sousa is to encircle the world with the strains of his marches. Next summer he will conduct his band of musicians on the first tour around the world ever undertaken by any bandmaster. The details of the tour were given today by Col. G. E. Hinton, assistant manager. A six months' tour of Europe is to begin the first of the year. The band will then return to New York and start at once across the continent, sailing from San Francisco for the east. Concerts have already been arranged for in Honolulu, Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki, Shanghai, Hongkong, Manila and other ports on the way to Australia, where a special tour has been arranged. A large guarantee has been offered for a Sousa concert in the Fiji islands. New Zealand and Tasmania are to be toured, and ten weeks spent in the south Pacific, when the band will sail for South Africa. India will be traversed extensively and Europe reached by way of the Red sea and the Suez canal.

FOR ATTEMPTED BLACKMAIL.

New York, Nov. 15.—William Becker, who was arrested in connection with the sending of threatening letters to a number of wealthy persons in this city, was held yesterday in $1,000 bail on the charge of attempting to blackmail. The letters purported to come from Russian nihilists and demanded $1,000. Fifteen persons received them, but none of the recipients was a noted man of wealth, as reported. One letter contained a threat of death in red ink.

WARRANTS FOR POLICE.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—A bench warrant was issued yesterday by Judge Chetlain for the arrest of Patrolman Patrick J. Mahoney, of the police department, and according to reports three other warrants were issued for the arrest of other members of the department, but the names of the other three implicated were not given out. The charge against Mahoney is complicity in the Barry and Curran diamond robbery, which was committed over a year ago, when over $7,000 worth of diamonds were stolen. Tom Barry and Jim Clark were suspected of the theft and upon

THE MARKETS.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Wheat opened steady on unresponsive cables and small receipts. A feature during the first hour's trading was commission house buying of May, supposed to be for the account of a prominent bull operator who has been taking on considerable wheat of late. December opened a shade lower at 72½¢ and advanced to 73½¢ soon after the opening. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 768 cars, which, with local receipts of 99 cars—11 of contract grade—made total receipts for the three points of 867 cars, against 1,176 last week and 913 a year ago.

Trading continued quiet throughout the session, but a good cash demand held prices steady and the close was firm, December ½¢ higher at 73½¢.

The effects of continued rains throughout the corn belt caused a steady opening in corn. December opened ¼¢ lower to ¼¢ higher at 52½¢ to 53¢, and on covering advanced to 53½¢. Local receipts were 175 cars, with 23 of contract grade.

The close was firm with December ¼¢ higher at 53¢.

There was comparatively little trade in oats and the opening was steady with other grains. December opened a shade higher at 29½¢ to 29¾¢. Local receipts were 181 cars.

A decrease in the receipts of hogs at the stock yards over the amount estimated caused a firmer tone to provisions at the start and a good demand for January held prices firm. January pork opened unchanged at $15.12½; January lard 5¢ higher at $9.02½; and January ribs 2½¢ higher at $7.90.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Nov. 15.—London sent quotations for Americans this morning at sharp advances over last night's closing prices here. The opening level here was higher than last night, but not up to the London parity. There were 2,000 shares of St. Paul sold at 172 to 172½, compared with 171 last night, and the advances reached a point or over in Reading, Canadian Pacific, Illinois Central, Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Great Western preferred B. Colorado Fuel jumped 2½. Missouri Pacific opened up ¼ and then fell a fraction below last night, and a number of other Gould stocks were heavy. New York, Chicago and St. Louis first preferred dropped 7½. Selling met the advance at other points and secondary quotations were lower.

The renewed selling which met the opening advance caused prices to crumble away quickly. Opening gains were wiped out and St. Paul, Canadian Pacific, Rock Island, Louisville, the Pennsylvania group, Reading and Amalgamated fell to a fraction below yesterday's close. Some feverish rallies followed interrupted by a dip to the lowest in some stocks. The movement was upwards again at 11 o'clock.

There was an extensive covering movement among the bears previous to the appearance of the bank statement. St. Paul was lifted 2½ over last night and the active list generally was up 1 to 2. General Electric's gain reached 5½. Northwestern 4½ and Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste Marie preferred 4½. Realizing sales followed the appearance of the statement. Attempts were made to support the market, but it gave way again. St. Paul reacted 1½ and other stocks a large fraction. The market rallied strongly and closed firm at about the top.

BUILD THEATER AT BLUFFTON

FORT WAYNE CAPITAL INTERESTED IN ENTERPRISE.

Manager Swayne, of Family Theater, at Its Head—Family Theater Will Close Tonight.

Manager W. I. Swayne, of the Family theater, is at the head of a company of Fort Wayne and Bluffton capitalists who will erect a theater in Bluffton, and everything is in readiness to begin the construction of the play house within a few weeks.

Manager Swayne declines to give the names of those who are associated with him in the new enterprise. "We have looked the Bluffton field over carefully," stated Mr. Swayne today, "and we are confident that the town would give good support to a theater. We propose to put up a structure to cost about $30,000 and have an option on the best site for the purpose in the town. The ground floor of the building will be divided into store rooms and the auditorium will be on the second floor. We expect to have the place open by March 1st."

The Family theater, located in the Saengerbund building, on West Main street, was opened by Mr. Swayne about two weeks ago, but the patronage has not been sufficient to make it a profitable enterprise and the place will be closed tonight. Mr. Swayne has provided good attractions and has done everything to make the place as attractive as possible, but with the exception of the first few nights the audiences have been small and Mr. Swayne decided to quit before balances began to appear on the wrong side of the ledger.

COMMISSIONS HAVE ARRIVED

COUNTY OFFICERS RECEIVE IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS.

Judge Heaton's Qualifies Him to Begin His Term at Once—Justice Matters.

This forenoon County Clerk Belet received a portentous looking roll which on opening proved to be the commissions of the recently elected county officials. They bore the great seal of the state, were nicely engraved looking bits of paper, although they did not look as though they were worth the fight it takes to get one, and at the bottom was seen the fine Italian hand of Governor Winfield T. Durbin.

Of all the commissions, the one issued to Owen Heaton was the only one which goes into immediate effect. His reads for "four years from the 15th day of November, 1902," which means that it goes into effect from this day and is now in effect. Judge Heaton had not been officially notified of the receipt of the commission this afternoon, but his law partner, Judge Vessey, said that the judge-elect had arranged his business affairs in such a manner that so far as he knew there was nothing to prevent him from qualifying immediately, and said that he had no doubt but that he would be prepared to assume the duties of his new position on Monday next.

The other commissions expire as follows:

John A. Bushman, surveyor, January 1, 1905.

Joseph E. Stults, coroner, January 1, 1906.

George W. Stout, sheriff, January 1, 1905.

Jacob Funk, treasurer, January 1, 1906.

Joseph L. Smith, auditor, January 1, 1907.

William A. Johnson clerk, January 1, 1907.

Ronald T. Dawson, prosecuting attorney, January 1, 1906.

AS TO JUSTICES.

There is nothing new in the case relating to the justices of the peace in this and other townships. The county clerk last evening forwarded the certificates of elections for all who had signified their willingness to serve, but did not certify as to who the justices-elect in Wayne township were elected to succeed. Albert Klinger, elected to succeed Charles Raybroun, of Washington township, has not signified to Trustee Daugherty that he will accept, and the trustee says he does not believe that he will serve. In Cedar Creek nothing has been heard from the present incumbent, Justice McComb, and the trustee of Scipio township has not yet made any report. The commissions for the others will probably arrive early next week and meantime the old justices will continue to serve.

TAKES IT UNDER ADVISEMENT

BERRY STREET CASE ARGUED AT PORTLAND.

Judge Smith's Decision Upon Defendant's Demurrer Will Be Given Later.

Judge Allen Zollars, Judge Walter Olds, Judge W. G. Colerick and Attorney N. D. Doughman returned at 9 o'clock this morning from Portland, where in the Jay circuit court yesterday Judge Smith heard the arguments upon the demurrer filed by the defendants in the case of O. S. Evans and others versus the S. B. Fleming company.

The case involves the use of East Berry street by the new Lima electric line, residents of the thoroughfare seeking to prevent the laying of tracks on the street. The arguments upon the demurrer occupied the entire day Friday. Judge Olds opened the case for the traction company, speaking the entire forenoon. He was followed by Judge Colerick and Judge Zollars for the East Berry street people, and Attorney Doughman closed the case for the company. It was 6 o'clock before the arguments were completed.

Judge Smith announced that he would take the case under advisement, and a decision upon the demurrer is not expected before early in December.

"TIM" A TOTAL ABSTAINER.

There is a disposition to glorify "Tim" Sullivan because he does not drink liquor. In doing this it is just as well not to overlook the fact that while he himself is not a drunkard he has been in the business of making drunkards for many years. He is no better than thousands of bartenders, for only a small percentage of them is addicted to rum. It is better for one man to soak himself with whisky than to soak a whole community.

When Sullivan first assumed the leadership of his district he visited Caulfield of the dock department and requested some patronage. Caulfield agreed to give him four laborers, and Tim started away delighted. A messenger stopped him at the outer door and told him to go back. Caulfield said: "On second thought, Mr. Sullivan, I'll make it ten instead of four laborers." To have ten appointments up his sleeve was so overpowering that Tim wept. "The fellow came at me in such a way that I took a fancy to him and promised to help him all I could. And I have never regretted it."

While positively uneducated, Sullivan is an expert at figures in an original way. He makes no memoranda, yet can tell when a note is due and what the interest on it amounts to better than his bookkeeper. One day in a blue mood he pretended to examine his books. To assist in that performance he employed an expert accountant, and suddenly turning to his bookkeeper, said: "Oh, now I've got you! What does this charge of $1,500 mean for salaries? There wasn't such a lot of money paid out."

"That isn't $1,500, Mr. Sullivan," replied the scribe, "it's $120."

"Well, now, don't you make fun of my education. I reckon the $120 is all right," said Tim, blushing.

In Albany he was extremely ill. When the rally came after two or three weeks of danger, the physician said that he needed a stimulant to brace him up. "Take a glassful of whisky now and then," were the directions. "Must I drink, doctor?" he asked. "You must have something. You are too frightfully weak and run down. A little toddy won't hurt you." "Don't you think I can manage to pull through somehow without the liquor?" "You might, and then again you might not. I wouldn't take chances." "Well, I will take the chance. I'll die right here before I drink a drop."—New York Press.

Duse a Marvel

The Great Italian Actress Repeats the Triumphs of Her Former American Tour.

Duse, the great actress, has come. Duse has again brought the New York theater going public to her feet. It is as though nature had laid its impress upon her and sent her here to show what gifts she keeps in reserve for her favorites. It does not seem possible that so much can be done with the countenance and so many emotions be startlingly depicted in a few moments as Duse shows us. Duse is a marvel, and her acting is transcendent. Words do not seem adequate to express the half I mean regarding this wonderful artist. Handicapped in an English speaking country by playing in a foreign language, she still won her laurels. Her person-appearance is at first disappointing, for none can call her pretty. She is more robust than her previous visit to this country, but still, to judge by her face, her health would seem not the best. She has not height or beauty, but she has a face that is powerful in its magnetism and strength. Her voice is clear and musical, and not a word she speaks is lost on her audiences. She never rants, and some of those who think art is only shown by screaming and beating of hands would do well to sit at her feet and learn that, to convince, one must be natural.

In the word "natural" the entire method of Duse's company is best expressed. It is as if one were an unsuspected witness to the revelation of a family skeleton. It is almost too real, but, oh, so grandly, marvelously above most of the players we have in this country. The only actress who approaches her is Mrs. Fiske, and I seriously think the line is not so marked between them now. Some day, with a right play, our greatest star may fall in line with Bernhardt and Duse.

Of course to see Duse once is to realize that she is an emotionalist in the purest conception of the term, but it is a pity that her selections here are not less ghoulish. In her repertory for New York she had only three plays. They are all by Gabriele D'Annunzio, and they are all morbid. "La Gioconda" shows mutilated hands eventually amputated and the consequently helpless condition of a sacrificing and devoted wife left unrequited for her love and murdered forever. In "La Citta Morta" she is again a blind wife whose husband loves another. In "Francesca da Rimini" she is killed by an outraged husband at the same time that he slays her lover, who is his brother. Where can three more depressing subjects for a repertory be found?

In "La Gioconda" D'Annunzio has given Duse every string on the harp of womanly emotion on which to play, and if the music rendered is weird it is the fault of the author, not the interpreter.

The play tells the story of a Florentine sculptor who is torn between a fascination for his model and his love and duty for his wife and child. He attempts suicide, and his wife's devoted love nurses him back to health. Here the play begins. During the period of convalescence he realizes all he would have lost in giving up his wife and in a beautiful scene thanks her for her devotion, approaches himself for his slipping away and swears faithfulness to her forever. Here Duse shows one phase of her wonderful ability. Her pleasure at his thanks, her regret to hear him upbraid himself and her effort to make light of his great sin, her wifely joy to know he really has been won back and her happiness in the birth of this young love for her are the emotions she shows in such a quick succession and so clearly as to require no knowledge of Italian to understand or appreciate. With returning health Lucio feels a longing to get back to work, and with this comes a fear of the model, Gioconda Diamli. He knows his weakness and realizes that it is safer for him never to see her. In real anguish he confides his peril to his best friend, who at first does not believe it is so serious and that Lucio can simply dismiss her.

The conversation alone fires Lucio with the old passion, and he explains that God created him to make statues and this woman is the only living person whose palpitating form gives him the proper inspiration and without her he can accomplish nothing. His unfinished statue, stopped by his attempt on his life, is to be completed and to make him famous, and he finally confesses that she knows her power over him, will not leave him and no matter where he goes will follow. He knows, he declares, that when she comes he will receive her and again be under her spell. This, he thinks, he wants to avoid, and the matter of a change of residence is discussed. Now, comes a letter from the model, saying she has with her private key gone every day to the studio and wrapped the unfinished work in wet cloths so as to preserve it; that she will continue this daily and will await his return.

Silvia finds this out and determines at any sacrifice to save her husband from the baneful influence of this woman. Against her sister's prayers she goes to the studio herself, allowing her sister to remain in the hall. The model comes expecting to see Lucio and confronts Silvia. Silvia tries dignity, then scorn, then upbraiding, then wifely right in her husband's studio, but in all she is worsted by the woman, who boasts their mutual love and says Silvia, not she, caused Lucio to attempt suicide, as the marriage yoke galled him. This enrages Silvia, who suddenly conceives that she will get rid of her at any cost. She tells a lie and says he sent her to say he was tired of La Gioconda and hoped her pride would now prevent her annoying him further. This, so plausibly told, maddens the model, and after some words she rushes to demolish the statue, asserting that, as she has been its inspiration, it shall not remain after she is cast out. Silvia rushes after her, crying, "I told a lie! I told a lie!" But she is too late, and in trying to save the statue she falls with her beautiful hands under it. These hands, his pride as well as hers, are horribly mangled, but she has saved the statue.

Lucio, coming in just then, passes the model, who is leaving, and is horrified to find Silvia in her sister's arms, mangled and bleeding. This is followed by the amputation of the hands and the recovery in a distant land to health of the unfortunate wife, who sacrificed all for nothing. Lucio goes back to the Gioconda, and the hardest thing the model knows is how to break the dreadful news to her little Beata.

Here the greatness of the fourth act comes in. On the terrace of her little home she waits for her sister to bring Beata and is visited by Sirenetta, who met them before when on a visit to this spot. This wild child offers starfish and flowers, and they are not taken. This worries her, and finally Silvia has to tell her she has no hands. The scene here of misery on both sides beggars description and is only heightened when Beata comes running in, her hands filled with flowers, which Silvia cannot take. She can only caress with tones, and her varied exclamations, "Beata, Beata," in every key are heart-breaking until the child asks: "Why don't you take me up and take my flowers? Don't you love me?" Then she shows her handless arms, together

TRAIN COLLISION

PENNSYLVANIA FREIGHTS IN TERRIFIC CRASH.

MET ON THE WARSAW CURVE

WHILE BOTH WERE RUNNING AT HIGH SPEED.

E. W. COWELL FATALLY HURT

ENGINEERS PEARSON AND ARCHER SLIGHTLY HURT.

The failure of an engineer to read his orders correctly caused a collision between freight trains on the Pittsburgh road a mile east of Warsaw at 12:30 o'clock this morning, which resulted in the fatal injury of one man and slight injuries to three others, the killing of forty-five cattle and twelve horses, the destruction of two locomotives and twelve to fifteen cars and serious damage to the tracks. The unfortunate ones are:

Brakeman E. W. Cowell, crushed about the chest and head; he died at 1:10 o'clock.

Engineer J. C. Pearson, left arm and shoulder bruised and sprained; not serious.

Engineer J. F. Archer, right hand and wrist cut; not serious.

Conductor Charles C. Plybon, bruised and shaken up by falling from a car.

The trains were the second No. 78, eastbound, hauled by engine 7260, with John C. Pearson at the throttle, in charge of Conductor C. C. Plybon, and the second section of No. 75, westbound, in charge of Conductor F. B. Tyler, hauled by engine 7058, with Engineer J. F. Archer in the cab. The scene of the wreck is a sharp curve east of Warsaw, where a view of the road is limited to a few rods.

The impact, as described by the trainmen, was terrific. The engines seemed to half bury themselves in each other and the cars were driven over and under each other until most all of those near the engines were nothing but splinters and scraps of iron. On the eastbound train were four cars loaded with cattle and one car loaded with horses. When the collision occurred the car loaded with the horses seemed to rear up and it was carried on top of a car of cattle, crushing the latter and killing all the cattle but one—a bull, who scrambled to his feet and walked away as soon as released from the debris. The other three cars loaded with cattle were also crushed into a very small space and their occupants killed outright or so badly injured that many of them had to be killed after they were taken out of the wreck. The howling of the wounded animals was simply frightful and a gentleman who was on the scene soon after the accident says it was the most horrible sight he ever looked upon.

Train 75 was made up principally of gondolas and flat cars loaded with coal and iron. Ten of these which were nearest the engine were wrecked, some of them so badly that they cannot be repaired and they will be burned. It was on one of these cars that Brakeman Cowell was riding. He was missing, and when a search was instituted by the train crews they found the brakeman beneath the wreckage, unconscious and bleeding severely. He was taken to a nearby farm house, where he received attention from Drs. Weber and Shackelford, of Warsaw, who were summoned to the scene, and later by Dr. C. B. Stemen, of this city.

Dr. Stemen was notified of the accident at 1 o'clock and was hastened to the scene on a special train. He found Mr. Cowell so badly injured that he could not survive and concluded that it would only hasten death to attempt to bring the man to this city, and he was left in the care of the Warsaw physicians. Dr. Stemen saw that Cowell's chest and head were crushed and that his death was only a matter of a few hours. He was bleeding from the nose and mouth and riding on the train would augment this hemorrhage and on this account he was not brought home with the others.

The engineers received their injuries through jumping from their cabs. Engineer Pearson alighted on his left shoulder and the side of his head, and his injuries are confined to bruises and sprains. He was found in a dazed condition, leaning against a telegraph pole, after the collision by Conductor Plybon, but he soon revived and was able to render assistance in the search for the missing brakeman. Engineer Archer was carried into a barbed-wire fence by the momentum when he jumped from his engine and his right hand and wrist were cut. Conductor Plybon and his brakemen were on the top of their train setting the hand brakes in the hope of averting a serious collision when the impact occurred and he was thrown from the car. His injuries are a few bruises, not serious enough to disable him in the least. G. F. Conrady and H. O. Dermody, the firemen, the former on engine 7058 and the latter on engine

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., N. Y.

7280, also jumped, but neither was injured.

Engineers Pearson and Archer were brought to this city on passenger train No. 6 and are now at their respective homes.

The wreck completely blocked the tracks at that point and some of the passenger trains were delayed from one to five hours. No. 6, on which the injured engineers came to this city, did not get in until 9:30 o'clock.

Engineer Pearson was interviewed by a Sentinel reporter as he alighted from the train at the depot. He said: "The accident was caused by a mistake on my part. I had instructions to pass the first section of 75 at Bourbon, which I did, and the second section at Warsaw. I forgot the latter part of the order and did not stop at Warsaw. When I discovered my error I did what I could to prevent a collision, but the train was heavy and we were moving rapidly and I could not stop."

E. W. Cowell, the injured brakeman, died at 1:10 o'clock today. The young man was twenty-one years old and a brother of Engineer William Cowell, of the Pittsburgh. His parents reside at Dixon and they have gone to the bedside of their boy. He was employed on the road about a year, was a good employee and very popular with his fellow trainmen. Yesterday this young man applied for an insurance policy of $1,000 in the Prudential company and in the afternoon was examined by Dr. E. J. McOscar. He was to return this evening and undergo the final examination.

The wreck is more costly than the one which occurred near that place last summer, but anything like an accurate estimate cannot be given at this time. The wreck crew is at the scene and will probably be there for two or three days.

Mrs. Bart, a sister of Brakeman Cowell and with whom he lived, was summoned to his bedside also, going to Warsaw on train 39 at noon.

FORMERLY WABASH MEN.

The recent advancement of E. A. Gould brings to mind a long list of other men now prominent in railway circles who began their careers on the Wabash road. As the reader will remember, Mr. Gould was recently elected general superintendent of the Missouri Pacific road. Others are:

George W. Stevens, formerly division superintendent here before Mr. Gould, now president of the Chesapeake and Ohio.

George H. Daniels, general passenger agent of the New York Central. Charles M. Hays, formerly vice president and general manager of the Grand Trunk railway.

F. W. Morse, third vice president of the Grand Trunk railway.

E. H. Fitzhugh, general manager of the Central Vermont railroad.

William F. Merrill, first vice president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

Charles E. Doyle, formerly of Peru, general manager of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad.

J. M. Herbert, manager of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad.

F. H. McGuigan, manager of the Grand Trunk railway.

W. A. Garrett, general superintendent of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad.

William Cotter, general superintendent of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern railroad.

C. H. Chappell, receiver of the O. & N. connecting roads.

H. C. Townsend, general passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific railway system.

H. S. Pritchett, president of the School of Technology, Boston.

WILL GIVE BENEFIT BALL.

The striking Wabash shopmen have arranged to give a benefit ball at Princess rink next Wednesday night, which, in a social way, will be the leading event of the fall. The management hope to also make it a financial success, and judging from the manner in which the tickets are being sold they will not be disappointed. Harry McColeman, of the machine shop; John E. Smith, of the blacksmith shop, and John J. Cleary, of the boiler shop, who compose the committee of arrangements, assure the Sentinel that they will secure the best music in the city and will get up a fine dance program. They also say that the ball will be conducted in a manner that will not give offense to any and that none but respectable people will be admitted to the hall. With Fred Stahl as chairman of the reception committee, assisted by other leading shopmen, the patrons can rest assured that their comfort and pleasure will be looked after and that they will receive courteous and respectful treatment. John Ryan will be chairman of the floor committee.

THE ACCIDENTS.

E. G. Pierson, a machinist at the Pittsburgh shops, had a foot badly injured this morning by a casting falling upon it. He could not walk and a hack was summoned to take him to his home.

A large steamer became fastened in the drawbridge at Cleveland Thursday, delaying all trains due at that point from one to six hours. Nickel Plate train No. 3 was five hours late in reaching this city, on account of the accident.

Con Greaney, of the Bass shops, had to call upon a surgeon to have a piece of steel removed from his hand. The metal got in the hand a week ago and a portion of it was removed at that time. The member became sore yesterday and the surgeon found another piece of steel deeply imbedded in the flesh.

George J. Castle, of the Pittsburgh blacksmith shop, had a hand burned on a piece of hot iron yesterday. He will be unable to work for awhile.

NO CHANGE IN STRIKE.

There is nothing new concerning the strike situation at the Wabash shops to report today. The matter is now "up to" Mr. Ramsey and until he takes some action nothing new can be expected. Mr. Ramsey passed through the city on train No. 8 yesterday, but his coming was not announced in advance and there was nobody at the depot to meet him. Motive Power Supt. J. B. Barnes, who had been here several days, left yesterday for Springfield without in the least changing the situation. The only signs of life at the machine, the blacksmith and the boiler shops are in the improvements that are being carried forward by the masons, carpenters and painters. All the machinery is receiving a new coat of paint and the windows have been cleaned, giving the place an air of neatness hardly expected at a railway shop. The employees will not recognize the place when they return to work.

ANOTHER INCREASE.

In his final package of instructions from official headquarters, General Yardmaster F. E. Pratt, of the Wabash, found a particularly interesting paper yesterday. It conveyed the information that the switchmen, which includes the yard conductors and yard brakemen, had received an increase in wages, or, in other words, that the Chicago wage scale would be extended to Fort Wayne and all other important points on the east run division. About six weeks ago a change involving the number of working hours occurred, which was practically an increase in wages, and the men were greatly surprised by the notice of another raise. Under the new schedule the yard conductors will receive $3.50 and the yard brakemen $2.50 per day. This action on the part of the Wabash officials gives hope to the shopmen that an increase in wages may also be extended to that department.

ENLARGING ENGINE STALLS.

The Nickel Plate bridge and building department has taken up the work of lengthening the stalls in the round houses to accommodate the big new engines now in service on the western division. This work commenced in Stony Island a few days ago and when that round house has been completed the men will give the Fort Wayne round house attention. The stalls are lengthened by knocking out the wall and boxing up sufficient space. The smoke stacks in the roof will also be moved out to the proper place.

LAW'S SUCCESSOR.

Considerable interest is now being taken in the appointment of a real estate agent to succeed C. D. Law as real estate agent of the Pennsylvania. The appointment has not yet been made public, but an announcement is expected at any moment. At Pittsburgh it is understood that G. C. Urquhart, who was Mr. Law's assistant, will be the appointee. He is fa-

When the SUN SHINES

On the morning dew and the birds sing their sweet songs, all Nature seems to lift a smile of reverential gratitude to the blessed Creator for making the world so beautiful. The man or woman out of harmony is out of health. Indigestion affects one's disposition as much as disease affects the mind.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

Kodol cures indigestion and restores health to mind and strength to body. This new discovery cures the sick and strengthens the weak when all other remedies fail, because it rests the stomach and at the same time enables the digestive organs to transform all foods into nourishment. What more is needed?

Relieve the stomach of all nervous strain, and nourish the body—give it strength, and you lay the foundation for health. Kodol does not only relieve indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles, but it gives such strength and vigor to each individual organ of the body that the disease is thrown off—overcome entirely.

YOUR DEALER CAN SUPPLY YOU.

Bottles Only. The $1.00 Size holds 2½ times the trial size, which sells for 50c.

I SUFFERED 20 YEARS.

I suffered with stomach trouble for 20 years, during which time I tried many remedies and spent much money. None of which did me any good. My condition gave me the blues and I despaired of ever being cured. A. F. Hine advised me to try Kodol, and while I felt it useless at first, I did, as it has entirely cured me. It is the best stomach medicine in the world. J. R. SANFORD, Oregon, Pa.

KODOL SAVED MY LIFE.

For a number of years I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Indigestion. It grew into the worst form, nothing I used did me any good. Finally, seeing Kodol advertised I tried it and, after using four bottles I was entirely cured. Kodol does all that is claimed for it. I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from Dyspepsia and Indigestion. MRS. CARRIE CRANFILL, Troy, I. T.

millar with the duties of the office and is said to be favorably looked upon by the officials. Mr. Urquhart is quite well known along the Pennsylvania lines and is liked by Pennsylvania railway men everywhere.

ENGINE OUTPUT.

During the week ended today the Pittsburgh shops turned out engines 7266, 7144, 7352, 7112, 7363 and 7164, and took in for repairs engines 281, 131, 909, 523 and 217. Engine 7058, a class R, and engine 7260, one of the big G-4-A pattern, which were smashed up in a wreck at Warsaw this morning, were turned out of the shops last week, after receiving general repairs. They will have to be returned there for repairs, which will probably be as expensive as the repairs they recently received.

MORE WORK FOR 'SMITHIES.'

Foreman C. A. Seinh, of the Pittsburgh blacksmith shop, has received the information that his department will hereafter make all forging supplies for the company's new road, the Columbus, Sandusky and Hocking, in addition to the work now done for other lines. This means lots more work at the 'smith shop.

NEW TRACK IN USE.

The Lake Erie and Western road has completed its sidings out at the Factory addition and they are now in use. This additional trackage is quite a convenience, for when not in use for the purposes for which it was built it can be used as storage tracks.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

John McKerring, of the Bass machine shop, is sick and off duty. Fireman DeVans and Wilson have resigned their positions on the Nickel Plate.

A fifteen-horse power motor left the electric works for Elion, N. Y., yesterday.

C. E. Koneman, of the storeroom of the electric works, has gone to Chicago for a short visit.

Brakeman T. H. Galivan resumed work on the Nickel Plate yesterday. He had an eye injured some days ago. S. Entredocher, a Pennsylvania passenger, was taken sick at the shop yesterday and had to be taken home in a hack.

The gross earnings of the Illinois Central for October show an increase of $245,190 over the corresponding month of 1901.

Fred Horstman has taken a position at the Bass works, being assigned to the night gang. He formerly worked at the Wabash shops.

C. H. Haskell, freight agent of the Chicago and Alton at Kansas City, who was thought to be fatally ill, is said to be improving and will doubtless recover.

A typographical error occurred in the item concerning Mrs. Bruns yesterday. The lady had a needle removed from her hand and the wounded member is rapidly healing.

The Massachusetts railroad commissioners have authorized the Boston and Albany railroad to lease 10 000 additional shares of common stock and $2,000,000 3½ per cent. twenty-year bonds.

F. Schramm, J. Junk, William F. Beckelmen, H. G. Thompson, F. C. Schulz and Henry Lerch, Pittsburgh chopmen, are sick and off duty, and Henry Diekmeyer is off duty to attend to some private matters.

H. G. Changer, chief clerk at the Wabash master mechanic's office, went to Detroit last night on business for the company. Mrs. Ganger accompanied her husband and they will visit friends while in that city. Burnhart Henn, who was conductor of the Lake Shore train that was wrecked in the Ashtabula disaster some years ago, died this week in Buffalo, aged 60 years. He had been out of railroad service for some time on account of ill health.

The Southwestern lines will hold a meeting in St. Louis on the 17th, to complete the work of organizing an immigration bureau and the appointment of a commissioner, who will be George De Haven, formerly general passenger agent of the Chicago and West Michigan.

The Wabash had a week-end excursion from Toledo to Chicago today and took into the Windy City the largest crowd that road has handled for some months. On this excursion there were 600 passengers out of Toledo and others were picked up at every station.

Thomas Shovlin, jr., of the electric works, entertained a number of his friends last evening, in celebration of his nineteenth birthday. Frank Heller's orchestra was present and furnished music for the occasion. An interesting feature of the evening's amusements was the singing of Thomas Shovlin and Ed Allenburg.

Charles Kaylor is in the city, visiting the families of Conductor Charles Spanley, of the Nickel Plate, and Foreman Fred Roca, of the Wabash shops. Mr. Kaylor had the misfortune to lose a leg and an arm in the Nickel Plate yards at Stony Island several weeks ago, as the readers of The Sentinel will probably remember. Several years ago, when Mr. Kaylor was a conductor on the Nickel Plate, he resided in this city.

George Metzger, of the Big Four, has been promoted from general agent to division freight agent, in charge of Cincinnati territory and the Chicago division between Cincinnati and Greensburg and the Whitewater road, and the authority of George Diefenbach, division freight agent at Dayton of the Big Four, has been extended to the Cincinnati division, from Elmwood to Springfield and from Springfield to Sandusky.

CAME IN SPECIAL CAR.

A large company of Huntington members of the Pathfinders came to the city last evening in a special car over the Southwestern interurban line to participate in a social session and banquet given by the Fort Wayne lodge. Several candidates were admitted, there were speeches and music and the occasion was pleasant throughout.

MET DEATH BENEATH WHEELS

HARRY RUST, NEWSBOY, FATALLY INJURED.

Run Over Last Night on Calhoun

Street by Brown Trucking Company Truck No. 13.

Harry Rust, 14 years old, son of Henry Rust, of Jackson street, died shortly after 6 o'clock last evening at Hope hospital from injuries received by being run over by a heavily loaded truck on Calhoun street.

Rust, who is a newsboy, was riding his wheel north on Calhoun street about 5 o'clock last evening carrying a bundle of papers under his arm and steering his wheel with his left hand. The pavement was very slippery from the rain, and opposite the First National bank the lad attempted to dodge truck No. 13 of the Brown Trucking company, driven by Thomas J. Hedges, of 1605 Hoagland avenue, but the wheel slipped and he was thrown in front of the wagon, both wheels passing over his chest and abdomen, crushing him in a most horrible manner.

The lad raised himself to a kneeling position after the wheels had passed over him, but fell unconscious and was carried into Woodworth's drug store by Walter Immel and Hedges, the driver of the truck, and Dr. Barnett was summoned. The patrol wagon was called and the boy was taken to Hope hospital. His relatives were hurriedly sent for, but he died before any of them reached the hospital.

No blame attaches to Hedges, the driver of the truck, who was driving south at a slow pace when the accident occurred. He was taken to police headquarters, but after a consultation between Superintendent Gorsline, Judge Dreihelms and Captain Whitney he was allowed to go. The truck was one of the largest owned by the Brown company and was used for hauling heavy hardware for C. C. Schlatter & Co. Captain Borgman, formerly of the police force, accompanied Hedges to the station, and on his representations of Hedges' character the man was not detained. The lad's parents were almost prostrated over the sad accident. Rust was a bright and ambitious little fellow, and was a member of the Newsboys' union.

INVENTS A NOVEL SYSTEM.

W. E. Jenkinson, of the Jenney Electric Light and Power company offices in this city, has just been awarded a patent upon an entirely new system of bookkeeping as it relates to gas, electric and water meters. Mr. Jenkinson's system has been evolved out of many years' experience in keeping hundreds of accounts of this character, and its advantage lies in the fact that the accounts can be kept accurately with infinitely less labor, time and clerical assistance than under the old methods which have been in use for many years. Under the new method, also, provision is made for natural increase of business, so that the taking care of additional accounts entails no extra expense, and persons familiar with the matter are of the opinion that Mr. Jenkinson's system will practically revolutionize old methods of keeping these accounts. The system has been in use at the offices of the Jenney company for some time and several thousand accounts are handled with the minimum of clerical labor and expense. Mr. Jenkinson has evidently produced a very valuable invention.

A 4th PARTY OF BUSINESS MEN WILL GO TO EAST CHICAGO.

Mr. E. A building with a store room 22x30 and a six room flat above, can be erected at a cost of $2,500. The store room renting for $50 a month and the flat for $25 a month. Houses and stores are furnished with electric lights, owned and operated by the city. The sewer system in this city is one of the finest in the country and macadamized streets are being constructed rapidly. The small investors at East Chicago are making a good thing and the large investors are getting rich fast. Keep your eye on the northern part of the state as the county of Lake will soon have in East Chicago the largest city in Indiana.

MR. DOOLEY DISSERTS ON THE JEWS

By FINLEY PETER DUNNE
The Sage of Ar-rchey Road.

"I see that the friend Secrety Hay is going to push Roomanya around for its threatment in the Jews," said Mr. Dooley.

"Where's Roomanya?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"I don't know," said Mr. Dooley, "an' Jawn Hay don't know an' nobody knows. It's somewhere down in the lower vest pocket in Europe with the rest in the small change. But anyhow it's been threatenin' the Jews badly—expellin' them as if they was poor immigrants, or denyin' them a vote as if they was Chinymen or ladies, or takin' away their right to thrille be jury as if they was may-gurs. An' Jawn Hay is goin' to stop it. I ain't sure how, but I suppose he's goin' to hold them up to the contempt in the civilized wurld. 'Tis the wisest way an' 'tis good exercise. We have the record for holdin' up eight-ounce nations to the contempt in the wurld."

"I don't see why we shud intherfere to help the Jews," growled Mr. Hennessy. "They're pretty well able to help themselves. They're all rich."

"I feel," said Mr. Dooley, "ye have a seelin' again Jawn Hay's friends. 'Tis ye'r idee that ivry Jew is a rich man. Maybe ye'r right. Maybe all them Jews that lives down in Canal street, twenty in a room is Rothschilds. I suppose me friend Finkstein that comes by here ivry mornin' hollerin' 'rags, ol' it's, has accumulated a fortune though ye wudden't think so be the look iv his hat. Prob'ly a great dale iv money is made be them scared-lookin' men that stops ye at a street corner an' wants to know if ye have anny ol' clothes to sell, gentlemen. They must be large profits as a middleman in a transaction involvin' a pair iv pants that cost two dollars when they were first bought an' has been worn through a picnic season an' a political campaign. I watched wan iv them joynts iv finance a whole day wanst. Out iv a total iv five hundred propositions, he got four hundred stony glares, ninety-eight 'go to the divvies,' wan punch in the eye, an' a cardigan jacket. But he must be rich. All Jews are rich.

"Wud ye like me to give ye me observations on the Jews? Ye wudden't? Well, I will. The reason the Jews is all in business is because they're nawthin' else for them to do. For cinchies, Father Kelly tells me, they have been crowded out iv ivrything else. They couden't be sojers or politicians or lawyers or judges. But they've wan pursuit where prejudice has no hand. When a man wants to borrow money, he never inquires about the character or religion iv the fellow he touches. He'd as lave borrow fr'm a stranger as a friend, fr'm a bad man as a good, fr'm a Jew as a Christian. He'd sooner. For he hopes not to be able to pay it back, an' not payin' back money to a Jew is a Christian vachue. So the Jews become money lenders. They handed out the roly boly to impors an' kings who come back fr'm wars an' pulled their teeth out. But when the impors needed the dough again, they had to go to Mose, an' Mose made them settle what they owed with interest. So in the end, the impors had the Jew's teeth, an' the Jew had the impors' money.

"Well, to be a good money lender, ye have to be strong at figures. Ye have to be able to add up quick iv ye'er head because the man that has the watch to soak, hasn't time to think iv annythin' but wantin' the money in a hurry. So the Jews learned figures. To learn figures right, ye've got to begin arly. Ye got to get into the habit iv thinkin' figures. Ye can't begin after fifty when ye'er head is full iv poetry an' song. The Jews start right away. As the pote that Hogan knows says, they lisp in numbers. They're taught to play with the usury law in the cradle an' it never ceases to be a toy with them. When me friend Ickstein wants his son to behave, he says: 'Maxey, if ye're a good boy, pah-pah will let ye go out in the yard an' play with the arithmetic.' I want wint to Mary Cassidy's school to see the childer show off. When she ast how many eight times eleven was all the little Jew Boys was red in the face an' snappin' their fingers an' all the little Irish boys was thyrin' to count it up with their lead pencils. But when she ast who won the battle iv Bunker Hill, a Jew boy thought it was Kuhn, Loeb an' Comp'ny, but the Irish boys knew who it was.

"In figures the Jews is strong. Where they're weak is not carin' about money. I mane it. A Jew cares about makin' money. A Connecticut Yankee an' a Scotchman cares about money. There are no Jews in New England. They can't make a livin' there. A Connecticut Yankee wud skin a Jew down to his collar button an' burn what was left iv him at the stake as a heretic. The reason for it is this, mind ye: A Jew makes down town an' spins up town. It's aisy come, aisy go with a Jew. He can't be dragged by a gent's furnishin' store with a show iv red neckties an' silk underwear in the window. He has to have a dimon' as big as a cake iv ice for the front iv his shirt an' a bottle iv Ody Colone for his hankerchief. He blows himself for a brown-stone house, while Higgins iv Stamford is livin' in a flat. He's the mainstay iv the theaters, while Higgins is takin' in the free letchers. His wife has a sealskin sack an' ates her roast goose off a good dish, while Mrs. Higgins has to throw her husband on the flure an' get the price iv a shirt waist out iv him with a hatchet. He's out at the races ivry day handin' his good money out to Yankee book-makers an' he can't hear the click iv a poker check without that queer feelin' that he oughtn't to go home. I never see a Jew that wudden't play cards or wan that knew how to play. Yes I did know wan. Some friends iv mine in the City Hall formed a syndicate an' sint him down to Columbus, Ohio, to traffic with a party iv mannyfacturers that used to play wanst a week in a room over a lively stable. He cud mark ivry card in the deck at wan shuffle, but he come home be freight. Each iv the Christians played with his own deck. Ye don't catch Higgins iv Stamford throwin' away his money at races or pokes. A Jew makes down town an' spins up town. I tell ye, a Connecticut man makes at both ends iv town. He makes a great dale on railways an' a little on eggs—a lot out iv other people's widows an' orphans an' a few out iv his own wife an' childer—much fr'm the stock exchange an' something on the butcher bill. Within all the money in the wurld is gathered in the hands iv many wan class the Jews won't have it. Most iv it'll be in New England, with a few odd dollars in Scotland.

"Why aint the Jew a sojer says ye. Why don't he fight for his country? What wud be the good? He knows he never cud get to be a gin'ral no sojer wud ever inlist unless he was sure some day he wud become a gin'ral. If a Jew iver got to be a gin'ral an' started out to lead the army some Christian behind him'd be sure to give him a poke in the back with a baynit. What an-ny wud follow Gin'ral Ikey Monheimer to victory? No, sir, the Jew's a wise man. When the country calls for bayots to sleep out, walk long an' be shot at for the flag, he stays at home an' rallies round the bond market. The government obligation driver, three cheers for the two, three an' four. I don't know but what it takes a braver man to buy a bond thin to fight a battle. I never did ayeither, so I can't say.

"But the Jews is a fightin' people. Did ye iver think that next to the wan gran' national fightin' race in the wurld there are more Jew prize-fighters than anny other kind? Even three the prejudice follows them an' the best iv them are forced to adopt some fine ol' Irish name. I know'd a gr-rent light-weight wan time be th name iv Terry O'Brien. His father's name was Solomon Felsen-thal an' he was as Jew as hair-oil. Terrence, or Abe, as perhaps I shud call him, was as cap'ble a man as if he'd been bor-n to the name. He had a splindid reach, but none too much considerin' the length iv his nose. Arther a glorious career he wint down to defeat at the hands iv a lad named Malone, whose arms were about the length iv a potato masher, but who had no nose to speak iv. Him comin' fr'm Kerry where they lost their noses in the time iv Cahal-More fr'm thyrin' to find out what was goin' on in the adjoinin' counties.

"No, sir, they're no reason for bein' frightened about the Jews. They won't hurt us. If they aint good citizens, they're good enough. They don't trouble the divorce courts an' I can't raymber iver seein' wan drunk—I mane to say, rule good an' pickled, come-on-all-iv-ye-polisemen-preferred—that kind iv drunk."

"They're gettin' the best iv ivrythin'," said Mr. Hennessy. "They'll drive us out iv the country." "They'll not," said Mr. Dooley. "They're wan proof that they're makin' no progress." "What's that?" "They're all dimmymrats," said Mr. Dooley.

FABULOUS TREASURE IN TIBER'S DEPTH.

Probably no more remarkable scheme for acquiring fabulous wealth ever entered the brain of man than that which has just been conceived by a learned Italian. Beside it the quest of the searchers for pirates' hoards and for the new El Dorado and those of the old philosophers who hoped to transform the baser metals into gold seem almost commonplace.

Briefly, this savant's scheme consists in searching the bed of the River Tiber, the sluggish stream that flows through ancient Rome, for the vast and priceless treasures which he believes to be buried in it, deep down under the silt of ages. There he expects to find wealth which will make the millions of Monte Cristo and the resources of King Solomon's mines seem beggarly—in the shape of the riches in money, jewelry and works of art that for centuries on end were thrown into the river as votive offerings to the god which the Romans believed dwelt in the historic stream. There he counts on discovering the masses of statues in gold, silver and bronze—many of them the works of Phidias and other ancient masters—that vanished beneath the Tiber's waters in the course of the religious struggles that continually shook the Eternal City. Also the weapons and armor worn by the thousands of soldiers who found graves amid the ooze on the bottom of the old river in the many battles that raged beside its banks and on its many bridges.

The most wonderful item of the treasure-trove which this explorer expects to bring to light is, however, the solid gold sacred candlestick declared by the Bible to have been ordered by God from Moses on Mount Sinai, which was for years on view in Rome, and which history tells us was sunk in the Tiber.

Prof. Ciro Nispi-Landi, the author of this startling project, is no mere "dreamer." A man of profound learning, he now holds the responsible position of inspector of the national monuments of the Italian government, and is the author of several thoughtful works on ancient Rome. It was the professor's historical studies and researches that inspired him with his great idea of searching the Tiber for treasures. They directed his attention first to the length of time during which Romans, rich and poor alike, cast into the slow-flowing river their most cherished possessions, and also to the period, unexampled in history, of thirty-four centuries in which the Tiber was the center of momentous events.

Prof. Nispi-Landi's notions of what golden results might come from a search of the Tiber bed were strengthened by what he saw while in charge, several years ago, of the work of building the Tiber's embankment. The professor noticed, as he tells me, that "whenever and wherever the Tiber was searched in the course of bridge building or of the work on the embankment ancient and valuable things always came to light." Generally they were valuable enough to pay the entire cost of the operations. For instance, one Italian bridge-building firm, in laying the two pillars of the Ponto Palatino, discovered antiquities to the value of several million lire.

Prof. Nispi-Landi looks upon the discoveries of these things as having merely "tapped," so to speak, the almost inexhaustible riches which he believes lie beneath the Tiber's waters.

"Most of the treasures," remarked the professor, in response to one of my questions, "are certainly to be found in the most central part of the river, and have remained undiscovered for that very reason."

Naturally the professor is rather diffident about divulging exactly how he means to conduct his explorations. He consented, however, to give a hint of his plans. In parentheses it should be said that Prof. Nispi-Landi has, for his purpose, divided the Tiber up into "zones," or districts. They are eleven in number, No. 1 covering most of the Tiber in Rome proper, the others the course of the river outside the Eternal City.

"We shall proceed," said the professor, "by diggin' parallel trenches for the first zone, where the ancient source of the river is dried up, with the aid of steam pumps, and, where the Tiberine waters follow their natural course, with pneumatic tanks modified and adapted to the special use of river exploration."

Prof. Nispi-Landi's enterprise will be financed by the Chevalier William Millar, a wealthy Anglo-Italian of Leghorn, who has implicit confidence in the savant's scheme. Just when the actual work will be begun is not yet decided. The permission of the state was given to the enterprise some time ago, but recently some "recommendations" have been made by the museum of antiquities. Compliance with them has delayed matters and it may be some time before the process of delving for the Tiber's treasures commences in earnest.

One of the points in Prof. Landi's theory which most inspire one with confidence in his reasoning is the scholar's demonstration that search in the Tiber always has been richly rewarded. In doing this the professor goes back as far as the thirteenth century, quoting one of his historians, Falminio Vacca, who described how, a small boat having sunk near the Ponto Sublacio and several swimmers being engaged to fish it out, arrows, swords, breastplates, arms of every description, "and other beautiful objects" recognized as purely Etruscan, were discovered and brought to the surface.

But, after all, it is necessary only to review one's Roman history a little to convince almost anyone that there should be riches in the Tiber. That they were put in is certain, and Prof. Nispi-Landi states that in all his research he has been unable to find any record of any large quantities of them having been taken out. The records of sacrifices to the Tiberine god go back to the beginnings of Roman history. Even Virgil tells how Aeneas promised Father Tiber that if he would protect him from peril, "Thou shalt ever be worshipped by me with homage and with gifts." The example of Aeneas was followed by the generations that came after him. Sacrifices were made on the eve of great events, such as battles, during times of national peril, to make sure of having the god on the suppliant's side, during great rejoicings and to commemorate illustrious men who had died. These were the great public sacrifices, of course, but private individuals in prosperity and grief offered personally similar sacrifices—generally the most precious things they owned. Back in the time of the Arcadians men used to be buried in the Tiber, but soon they were replaced by puppets and graven images, and after this the offerings of money, jewelry and precious things began.

It was not only the Romans who sacrificed to Father Tiber. The superstitious of all the southern races seem to have been pretty much alike at this time, and whatever force was near the river made votive offerings to it. The Huns, the Goths and the Vandals all hurled a large part of the plunder derived from their sacks of Rome into the ancient stream. "Such offerings were," says Prof. Nispi-Landi, "the cause which contributed chiefly and for the longest period to enrich the bed of the Tiber with precious relics. Another cause, however, was the casting into the stream by the Romans of their possessions in order to prevent their being captured by enemies."

Prof. Nispi-Landi, whose works, "Rome Before Humanity" and "M. Agrippa and His Temple," are, by the way, well known in Italy, has not by any means contented himself with the conviction that treasures in the aggregate are below Tiber waters.

He has drawn up for himself a list of individual relics of which history speaks and has attempted to locate each in one of his "zones," according to the details which he has been able to gather as to its sacrifice. For instance, the professor believes that the sacred candlestick of Moses, the object that he would like best of all to recover, will be found in its first zone, or in that part of the Tiber near the famous Castle Angelo, close to the Vatican and St. Peter's—probably the part of the river that most Americans have seen.

Says the professor: "It is certain that religious objects were left untouched by the superstitious Alaric and Genseric; indeed, in 509 and 529 the candlestick was still to be seen in Rome. I regard it as certain that the emblem ordered on Mount Sinai, which stood in the tabernacle of King David, which was carried round the walls of Jericho and was venerated by Caesar and Pompey, was eventually lowered by the Jews down from the bow of Esculapius' shop on Tiberine island on our first zone. The Jews themselves always have asserted that it is there. Consider that more than 1900 years have passed since then and that the candlestick was then about 1,550 years old, making a total of 3,448 years! What importance would its discovery have? Who should have the greatest claims to its possession? How much should be paid to the discoverers? It is not easy to answer these questions. Everything should be as wonderful as the candlestick itself."

Prof. Nispi-Landi will be one of the most disappointed men in the world if he does not bring up from the Tiber's bed thousands of suits of rich armor, of swords and shields, the property of the wounded men who through custom were hurled into the river, and those that fell in the fearful battles on the bridges. Among these he expects will be the armor of brave old Horatius Coclus and his men, who kept the Pons Sublicus against the Etruscan army and finally leaped into the Tiber. "There must be," he writes, "in that part of the river arms, coins, ornaments, jewels, such as buckles, collars and rings, all rare and valuable as the only relics of the Romans and Etruscans of those days. He expects to find the famous Minerva statue of Phidias, as well as those of Hercules, Mars and Venus, with the pearl of Cleopatra. He believes he will bring to light the solid gold statue of Claudius II., which once stood in the capital, and which was thrown into the Tiber to save it from the Goths.

Probably one of the first questions that will come into the mind of anyone who reads this story of Prof. Nispi-Landi's great project will be: If the Tiber is so rich in treasures, why has no one tried to get them before, or at least why has no one thought of doing so? Well, for hundreds of years men of an ingenious turn of mind have been pondering upon doing and attempting to do that precise thing. For his scheme of searching the Tiber's bed Prof. Nispi-Landi claims no originality; he claims only to be the first man who has yet set about doing it with the proper mechanical devices.

SOME THINGS THAT CHILDREN DO AND SURVIVE.

Somebody's well worn aphorism that a kind Providence takes special pains to look out for the safety of children and fools, is especially true of children, as is borne out by the newspapers of every day. It is true that the fool who rocks the boat seldom is drowned, but when it comes to escaping the hand of fate by the skin of the milk teeth, the child has the bulge over any other style of the genus homo.

To all appearances, one might think fly paper, to the infantile palate, would appeal about as strongly as would a section of Turkish rug. But fly paper rapidly is taking the place so long held by the can of concentrated lye. At Manchester, Ia., the other day the two-year-old son of George Parkinson took a few bites out of a sticky bit of fly paper, and only a stiff run for the family physician and his prompt response with a stomach pump saved the youngster for another go with some other dangerous combination that may taste better. About the same time that little Arthur in Iowa was nipping into his special sheet, three-year-old Annie Hiebert, at Randolph, Neb., tried for a record run on the part of papa and the doctor, both of whom won by a nose.

Since the time of William Tell it is presumed that a million eyes have been sacrificed, and wounds and deaths beyond count have come to the small imitators of the man who hated Gessler. Probably only our own Fourth of July has a longer list to its discredit. So far this season, however, the five-year-old son of Dr. Greenmeyer, of Sloan, Ia., seems to be the only victim of the Tell habit. The Greenmeyer boy was "it" on this occasion, and after papa Greenmeyer had sewed up the scalp along which the bullet from a neighbor boy's gun had plowed for five inches, little Henry felt a good deal better, besides knowing a whole lot more.

Jennie Goff, of Burlington, Ia., fell with a seven-year-old splash into the home cistern the other day, since which accident the rest of the family has been boiling water. Jennie had been looking into the quiet depths of the water through a 2 by 4 foot opening when the unexpected happened. A sister who had cut her own cistern eye teeth several years before ran up, lowered the bucket, and the child, coming to the surface, grabbed it and held on till the father came to the rescue.

Henry Stevens thought it was tough enough luck to dig seventy feet for water near Edgerton, Minn., and then to have to fill the hole up because he didn't strike water. But when Henry had filled to within twenty feet of the top his daughter Berenice, looking in to see how near the top the dirt was, fell in, striking on her head and shoulders, but emphasizing in a marked manner how careful was Providence. She was scarcely scratched by the fall.

For an absolutely novel experience and for the setting of a new pace for the infants of his own favored neighborhood, little Johnnie McAlonan, of Los Angeles county, California, stands in the front ranks of the summer's escapades. Little Johnnie lives in a section where the irrigating pipe is a necessity to agrostologists, and as a flume fourteen inches in diameter passes the door of the McAlonan residence, Johnnie dropped into it the other day and was carried through 425 feet of it in just seven minutes. At that time the brother of the infantile Johnnie had run to the end of the flume, where he picked the youngster out of the reservoir, into which the flume debouched. Johnnie was strangled a good deal, but was soon drained and dried.

Frank Brewer, of Yankton, S. D., is a little beyond the age limit of this story, but Frank's experience should not be lost because of a little thing like that. Yankton, incidentally, has been building a new theater, and Frank's ten-year-old curiosity was excited by the operations. When a wagon load of sand was driven up to the spot the other day Frank forgot himself so far as to step backward until a horse knocked him under the wheels. Both wheels of the loaded wagon passed squarely over Frank's neck, but scarcely had the hind wheel jolted off it when the boy got up, brushed his collar with some degree of indignation, and went on home, for the purpose of concealing the incident from both his father and his mother.

Fred Kreitner, living near Belleville, Ill., also is rather old for listless, but coming out from under a strawstack after being buried there for four hours doesn't happen often in a lifetime of any kind. Fred, twelve years old, presumably was out late the night before, and instead of risking crawling through his bed room window while graveyards yawned, he concluded to crawl in under the strawcarrier of a thrashing machine that had been at work on the Kreitner farm the day before. Fred did not awaken with the birds, and when the thrasher started up the next morning minus a half hand it went with such an energy that Fred was buried out of sight and hearing. The great carrier buried him deeper and deeper, the hole in the straw which he had scooped out saving him from suffocation, as the fresh raw straw thatched the place over. Search had been in progress for the boy several hours, and finally the machine was stopped that the whole force might join in it. Then it was that two of the men on the stack heard muffled cries and traced them to the spot under which the boy was buried. He was unconscious when dug out, but soon revived.

At Oroville, Cal., a horse driven by Mrs. Schofield got scared and backed the buggy into an irrigation ditch, overturning it and throwing the driver and an infant child into the water. Mrs. Schofield was rescued without difficulty, but, true to the aphorism, Providence had to look out for the little one. This it did by allowing it to fall head first into the water, and in this position to stick in the mud. Not till the buggy was righted was the child found under it, and it was revived without difficulty only because, being upside down, water had not entered into its lungs in quantities to drown it.

Rufus Carris, jr., two years old, climbed on a pantry shelf at his home near Keota, Ia., and not finding either fly paper or concentrated lye at hand, had to content himself with a dozen two grain tablets of strychnine, topping off with a bite out of the lid of the box. The stomach pump saved little Rufus, and at the present writing there are many chances for his growing up to be a big, raw-boned freckled country boy whom everybody will call Rufe for short.

Emil Wagner, three years old, was shot in the head by his nine-year-old brother in Milwaukee some time ago, the bullet, of small caliber, entering the child's brain. Death was expected at any moment, and no effort was made to extract the ball, as it was regarded as impossible. The child was sent to the hospital, and after several weeks there finally has been discharged as cured. He suffers no inconvenience from the lead missile, and no impairment of his mentality is expected to result.

Patrick Newell, thirteen years old, played in especially hard luck when he dived into the river at St. Paul, just above a tin can which rested on the bottom with the sharp side up. Patrick struck the can as a glancing blow that left his nose tip as food for a Mississippi river catfish, and which has given the physicians a pretty stiff job of carpentering and joining.

But boys will be boys. There are several ways of doing it, too. Richard Clay, of Richmond, Va., did it at seven years old by going out and holding up Carl Farish, whom he incidentally beat up a few just for luck.

He got a quarter and a trial in a justice court for the escapade.

CURE FOR GRIP.

According to a French physician an attack of grip can be cured by cologne. The prescription is also recommended for colds, which at this season are so stubborn and so common. To be effective the cologne must be used at the very beginning of the disease. The very best cologne is poured on a handkerchief and the fumes instantly inhaled through the nose and mouth. If the trouble is concentrated in the throat the relief, it is said, is almost immediate. At first the inhalations are made at intervals of but two or three minutes. After a burning sensation has been excited a period of ten or fifteen minutes may elapse. Twelve hours is a fair test with the remedy, its failure after that length of treatment being regarded as an indication that grip was already too far under way.

Complaint is made that out of 51,000 street lamps in Paris only 39,000 are lighted at night.

In all Egypt there are only 1,000 medical men of all nationalities; 999 of them are Europeans.

MACHINE HELD HER PRISONER.

(Columbia City Post.)

Mrs. Frank Morsches was made a prisoner Wednesday afternoon in her own home, on North Washington street, for about an hour and a half.

She was operating a sewing machine and from a cause that she cannot explain herself she got her index finger of the left hand on the feed, and the needle went clear through the finger. The needle was bent and the lady was unable to get the ma-to take it apart, but in this she failed.

Being unable to gain her freedom,

she dragged the machine from the center of the room with her right hand to a front window, so that she could attract the neighbors. The left hand was held secure and the pain was intense. Relief was finally given Mrs. Morsches, but not until after the neighboring ladies gave no in answer to a telephone call and literally tore the machine apart and was freed of the grasp of the machine.

Dr. Schuman was taken home by the husband and took the needle from the finger in two pieces.

Judge Ferrall reasserted his intention of refusing to grant divorces on trivial excuses.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

Mr. and Mrs. Le Sage Ten Brock celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage last evening by entertaining about a hundred guests in Floral hall in the Flick building. Pinks, ferns and carnations made the hall very attractive and games and music furnished entertainment for the guests. Partners for supper were found by matching lavender and gray cards stamped with the Ten Brock coat of arms. Seidel served refreshments and afterwards the guests danced or played cards as they pleased. Mr. and Mrs. Ten Brock were born in Holland, and both came to America in 1886, meeting for the first time in Grand Rapids, Mich., where they were married. They have lived in Fort Wayne but a few years, but have made many friends. Guests from out of the city who were present last evening were: Mrs. and Mrs. P. J. Kraus, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 15.—James McCuen, of Hermosillo, Mexico, who is now visiting friends in Los Angeles, says that recently a Seri Indian, one of the mainland tribe, who was employed on his cattle ranch, told him that there are seven white men held as prisoners on Tiburón Island.

It is believed by those who heard the story of the prisoners that among them are Lieut. T. E. L. Robinson and his partner, Mr. Logan, of Cleveland, who went to the island ten years ago and never returned, and Captain Porter, of San Diego, another of the several persons who it has been reported were massacred and eaten by the Indians.

Facts About the W. L. Douglas Shoe Business.

To those familiar with the shoe or leather trade it is well known that I am the largest, as well as most successful manufacturer and retailer of men's Goodyear welt (hand-sewed process) shoes in the world.

My object in disposing of a half interest in the business is primarily that it be perpetuated and extended.

The name W. L. Douglas has, which is accepted everywhere as a standard of merit, has been applied principally to men's Goodyear Welt (hand-sewed process) shoes. It can be well applied to all kinds and prices of shoes.

I began the business in Brockton in a small way 21 years ago, and from time to time have increased it, until at present a business of $5,500,000 annually is transacted. The business has always been profitable. There has not been a year in the past 12 when the business has not earned in actual cash more than an amount necessary to pay 7% annual dividend on $1,000,000, and the past four years the business has more than doubled, and is still growing.

As an evidence of the prosperity of the business, the fact is cited that from 727,831 pairs of shoes sold in the year ending July 1, 1898, the business has steadily increased to 1,754,000 pairs for the year ending July 1, 1902, or more than a million pairs increase.

An addition is now being built to the Douglas factory, which will increase the output from 2500 pairs to 10,000 pairs daily, and increase the volume of business to $20,000,000.

The W. L. Douglas shoe business is managed on an entirely different plan from that of any other shoe concern.

The business is now and has been for many years managed by a board of directors composed of capable business men. This board of directors are young men, heads of the business departments. They have learned my system of manufacturing and method of selling shoes. The business has more than doubled in the past four years under their management, and is now paying larger profits than ever before. There can be no break in this board of management, as each head of department has an aide assistant who can step in at any time and take charge of the department with which he is connected. This plan was originated by me for the purpose of perpetuating the business, and making it permanently prosperous without requiring my personal supervision.

The Douglas product is marketed in an original way. The method by which the goods are sold has made a place for the Douglas shoe in all principal cities and towns in the United States.

THE TALMAGE SERMON.

(Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, D. D., Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago, in the Christian Herald.)

In this sermon Rev. Talmage delivers a thoughtful and impressive discourse on the "Perils of Commercial Travelers." The text, from Nehemiah xlii, 20, reads: "So the sellers of all kinds of wares, lodged without Jerusalem once or twice."

President Harrison once sent forth a proclamation which aroused widespread interest. In it he announced that the claims of many Indian tribes had been brought up by the government. Therefore, by the power which was vested in him as chief executive of the United States, he would, on April 22, 1889, open the central portion of Oklahoma to the American people. All the men and women who at that time entered the new country could stake themselves out a claim or a lot or a farm. On the appointed day, thousands upon thousands of people assembled upon the borderland. Some sat upon fleet horseback, ready to make the race for the choicest lots in the cities which would within a few days spring up as if by magic, and the streets of which were already laid out. Some came on foot. These disesteemed themselves of all superfluous clothing, so that they could run as swiftly as possible. When the signal was given by the pistol held in the aviator's hand, the great multitude broke into a run. The would-be settlers rushed ahead so fast that within a few hours the whole land was taken possession of, and cities like Guthrie began to teem with life. Oklahoma, only ten years after it was first opened to the white man, had nearly 400,000 inhabitants.

But no sooner was Oklahoma settled and the little country stores set up, than the wholesale merchants of New York, and Philadelphia, and Chicago, and St. Louis began to send into this new territory another great army of invaders made up of the representatives of their different establishments. These modern crusaders are been aptly termed in the commercial traveler's parlance, the Knights of the Grip. Instead of riding a war charger like the knights of olden time, they rode behind an iron horse, which is called a locomotive. Instead of carrying a spear or a shield, they carried models or lectures, showing how the steel and iron had been melted into ploughs and reapers and spades and axes and saws. Instead of having mailed armor, they had pieces of cloth, which they carried as samples of clothing, which they wanted to sell to the storekeepers for the new armers and their wives and children. There is not a town in the United States, no matter how small, may be, or how newly established, which has escaped the weekly, if not daily, invasions of the commercial travelers.

AN ANCIENT PERIL.

In the scene of my text can be found almost an exact duplicate of the invasion of the newly settled regions of Oklahoma by the Knights of the Grip. No sooner did Nehemiah, the governor, return from his Babylonian exile and rebuild the walls of Jerusalem and make it a safe place in which to live, than the commercial travelers of that day began to flock towards the Davidic capital to disperse of their goods. But here was one habit about many of these ancient commercial travelers which Nehemiah did not like. Some of them would persist in arriving at the city walls on the Sabbath day, and trying to turn God's day of rest into a day of barter and gain. The governor, in order to stop the sin of abbas desecration, ordered that the city gates should be closed on the Sabbath, and not be opened again until the morning after the Sabbath, no matter how much these ancient commercial travelers might want to get in and escape the dangers of being murdered by the robbers who nightly infested the surrounding hills. Thus we read the words of my text with a clearer interpretation, "So the sellers of all kind of ware, lodged without Jerusalem once or twice."

As we walk in and out among the sellers of Nehemiah's time, barred without the city walls, and examine their piled-up bales and hear the ruttered curses of the men blaspheming because they could not enter the Jerusalem gates, and watch the preparations they are making to resist the attacks of the robbers, I am reminded of the dangers to which our modern Knights of the Grip are exposed. They, too, have lurking enemies who would despoil them, and cause those enemies are more treacherous, more insidious, and more ruthless than the Bedouin warriors who menaced the ancient travelers of Nehemiah's time. I am anxious to point them out, but the imperiled men on their guard.

The evil dangers threaten a commercial traveler's life when he is away from home. They try to ambush a seller of all kinds of ware when he is on the march. They strike at his heart in a time and in a place when he is apt to think he can sin with impunity, because no one will be the wiser, as he can cover up his tracks. They come to the Knights of the Grip in the insinuating and dangerous ways that evil temptations sometimes overthrow Christian people when they are traveling abroad. It is a well known fact that the average European travelers will commit sins in Paris, or Vienna, or Rome, or Monte Carlo, or Peking, or Calcutta, that they would never dream of doing if they were at home among their own friends and neighbors. The young Dutch queen, Wilhelmina, illustrated this common tendency of the human race to be worse away from home than they are by their own fireside, in the quaint and pointed answer which she gave to the Prince of Wales, when visiting Queen Victoria some years ago. The then heir apparent to the English throne asked her what she was most impressed by in England. "It is to find that the English people are so refined and gentle and kind and religiously devout in their own homes," she replied. "One would never have guessed it from the specimens I have seen traveling in Holland." An average man can commit as a rule twenty sins away from home, when he is traveling alone, in a railroad train, or stopping alone in a hotel, or living alone with strangers, far more easily with less risk of injury to his position and reputation than one sin when he is being watched by his employer's eyes, or when he is in daily companionship with a Christian mother, wife or child.

It makes an immense amount of difference how a locomotive will act when it is on the down grade whether or no the engineer has perfect control over its powerful Westinghouse brakes. It makes an immense amount of difference with some of us when we are heading towards the open drawbridges of sin, whether or no we have our loved ones near by, who are ready to reach out their hands to help us close the throttles and apply the spiritual brakes, so that we can halt before we have gone too far and it is too late to stop.

CELESTIAL REINFORCEMENT.

But though the swift moving currents of daily influences in a commercial life are apt to flow in the wrong direction when he is away from home, yet that is no valid excuse for his yielding to temptation. In the first place, God has distinctly declared that He will never allow any temptation to come nigh us which is greater than we can bear. If we will only throw ourselves upon His mercy, and plead and continue to plead for Divine strength. Mighty as are the temptations the commercial traveler meets when he is away from home, the Divine power which is at his disposal is infinitely stronger. It can triumph over every opposing force. That noble Gospel minister of Pittsburg estimated it rightly when, in inaugurating a mighty spiritual movement, the obstacles to it were pointed out by two Christian friends. "Brethren," said good old Dr. Riddle, "this is God's work, not ours. You two men seen to think that there are only three of us to start in this movement. Mr. So and So, you are one cipher in God's hands. Our brother here is another cipher. I am another cipher. That makes three ciphers. God is at least one. Therefore, if we place our three ciphers on the right side of God's numeral, we shall have in the beginning the strength of a thousand men with which to start in this work." The commercial traveler starting on one of his trips may consider himself only a cipher in the conflict, but if he will ask and plead for Divine help to meet the temptations of the road, his own human powers for the resisting of temptation will be infinitely increased and multiplied. They will be sufficient to overcome every temptation, even though his Christian father and mother and wife and children may be absent from his side.

But there is still another reason why the commercial traveler should not yield to the temptations which he meets away from home. The modern Knight of the Grip is naturally a stronger man, mentally, morally and physically, than the average man who is compelled to stay at home and work. It takes brains, and lots of brains, to be able to sell goods away from home. The time is past when the great merchants think that any drunken, gambling, blaspheming employe is good enough to go upon the road. The employers today demand that their commercial travelers be men of character, of brain, men with the moral stamina to say yes and no. And young men, the mere fact that you are a commercial traveler is proof positive that you have character enough, by the grace of God, to be able to resist any temptation which you may meet in your travels.

SERVICE OF PICKED MEN.

That strong men are naturally selected for the difficult positions in life was illustrated by an incident which James Reynolds, the great Sunday school secretary, once told me in reference to the late civil war. As chaplain in the northern army, he was one Sabbath day preaching to the soldiers of his regiment. The service was being conducted out of doors. The soldiers were sitting upon a hillside near the camp, while he stood at the foot of the hill. In the midst of the sermon the colonel came to his side and said, "Chaplain, I would like to interrupt the meeting a moment." Then he called the names of about a dozen men and ordered them to go to his tent at once. After the benediction Mr. Reynolds asked the colonel why he selected these twelve men, and why he did not select any other twelve who happened to be near his tent. "Because," Chaplain, answered the colonel, "I wanted the bravest and the truest and strongest men in my regiment. I am going to send those men out on a very important mission. Perhaps they will never come back, because the dangers they will have to face are very great. The safety of this whole army may depend upon their faithfulness in their work." So, in the mercantile world, the business men select their most trustworthy employees for the most difficult places. And as there are no tasks more difficult than those which confront the commercial traveler, the best men are naturally detailed for the road. Therefore, my brother, it is no excuse for you to say your temptations are greater than the average man's. You are naturally stronger than the average man. By the help of God, you can and ought to be able to overcome these temptations. The reason you have been selected for the duties of a commercial traveler is because you have a keener mind and a better moral ballast than the average clerk, who was working by your side in the store.

Temptations assail the commercial traveler alike when he is boyed up with great success and when he is discouraged by great financial depression; when he is thrown off his guard by exultation or disheartened by a long succession of bitter disappointments. Many commercial travelers do not receive a regular guaranteed salary. They work on a system of commissions. The more goods they sell the more money they receive. The less goods they dispose of the less income they have. The average commercial traveler's income is apt to ebb and flow like the tides. In one town, the Knight of the Grip may sell thousands of dollars worth of goods. In every store he enters he finds a large purchaser. In another town, he may not even meet expenses. Then, when the average commercial traveler has what he calls a "run of luck," he is apt to be unduly elated, and that elation is often the means Satan uses to trip him up, and hurl him over the precipice of sin. Or, he has what is called a run of bad luck. He may go on, week after week, and find that a rival, who represents a firm carrying the same line of goods, may have preceded him and swept his district clean. That disappointment may also be the means of driving him into the quicksands of sin. The imminent danger of exultation and disappointment are the Charibdis and the Scylla which every commercial traveler has to face.

IMAGINARY SPECULATION.

Now, my friend, you who spend most of your life selling goods upon the road, I want to warn you against the dangers which come from either exultation or discouragement. Henry Ward Beecher cured one of his parishioners of the temptation of entering into Wall street speculations by an experiment. The pastor of Plymouth church asked his friend never to gamble in stocks for at least three years. During those three years, Mr. Beecher wanted him to make a study of the stock market. Every time he thought stocks were going up, he was to make a memorandum of the same, and decide how much he wanted to buy. And every time he thought he ought to sell stocks to make a memorandum of the same. Then, at the end of three years, Mr. Beecher said: "Count up your results and find out where you would have stood if these purchases and sales had been actually made." This the parishioner did, as Mr. Beecher desired. At the end of three years he found that if he had entered Wall street and speculated as he wished to do, he would have been bankrupt ten times over. You, my commercial friend, may learn the same lesson. You do not have to experiment yourself, but you may see in the lives of other commercial travelers the results of allowing either exultation or despondency to overcome you. Recall the history of these commercial travelers whom you have known in the last five or ten years. I want you to try and remember all the drinkers and carousers who started out with you upon the road. Almost without exception, you know they have lost their positions and are living in comparative poverty, or are lying in drunken graves. Now, my friend, dare you, as an intelligent man, have run any such risks? Dare you, in any circumstances, drink or dissipate, no matter how intense may be your disappointments or how exultant your joy?

Dangers threaten a modern commercial traveler's life because his mind is often beclouded on account of physical debilitation. To be a really successful commercial traveler, a young man ought to have a physical constitution of iron. He ought to have the same kind of bone, and muscle and sinew which made two knights of old famous. He ought to be able to digest any kind of food, sleep in hard or soft beds, sleep on a hall lounge or in a chair, or lying upon the bare wooden seat of the caboose of a freight train. He ought to be able to walk along a dark country road at midnight in midwinter, to catch the one o'clock train for the next town. He ought to be able to assimilate irregular meals, and have his nightly rest broken up once or twice, and sometimes even thrice, by the changing of cars, and yet be cheerful and happy and sell his goods just the same during the day. Alas, I well know what are the physical difficulties of a traveler's life. For many years I have, off and on, traveled around the country as a lecturer. I have had to suffer for all these trials, and have met and talked with the Knights of the Grip, in many a lonely station in the midnight hour, while waiting for a belated railroad connection.

PERILS OF PHYSICAL DEPLETION.

But under the very brightest of conditions, and even though a man's backbone may seem to be made of steel, nature will assert itself. A commercial traveler must always pay the price, and have his physical frame rebel at the hardships which it has been made to suffer. And so during these times of physical exhaustion, a commercial traveler on account of the physical becloudment of his mind, is often apt to take a depressed view of life. He is apt to often lose his faith in God and in his fellow-men, and to feel that his own life is not worth the living, and that he is of but little use to his fellow-man. My brother, I want you, if you are a commercial traveler and a stranger, who have just by chance dropped into this church, to know and feel that your life is worth living. God does love you. Your dear ones are dependent upon you. It is of infinite importance whether you do right or wrong. You must not let your belief in God falter, when you need a physician and a dose of medicine and a good rest. You must not let the hand of Satan touch you and lead you into the paths of sin when your head aches and your digestive organs refuse to do their proper work. One of the greatest generals of the ages was defeated in battle and driven into exile, because, the night before the battle opened, he was writhing in physical torture, produced by a sudden and violent attack of dyspepsia. Many a commercial traveler has been defeated in life's spiritual battle, because his health has become undermined and undermined. Oh, ye Knights of the Grip, be very careful of your physical health, for your spiritual happiness and faithfulness may be destroyed through your physical debilities.

Dangers threaten a modern commercial traveler also unless he rigidly fulfills his religious duties and spiritually employs himself on the Lord's day. It is very easy when Sabbath morning comes, in a little town where the commercial traveler has to spend Sunday, for him to say to himself, "Well, I guess I will not go to church today. I think I will stay in my room and read the morning newspaper, or write some letters." It is very seductive after a hard week's work for the commercial traveler to go to bed Saturday night, with the intention of staying there until half-past ten o'clock the next morning, and then, in order to save time, to break the Lord's day and take the Sunday train for the next town. Or, if a commercial traveler is spending Sunday in a large city, it is very easy for him to go and hear the different popular preachers in the same way that, out of curiosity he might go and see the great tragedians act the part of "Hamlet," or "Othello," or "Richard III," or a "Dr. Jekyll" and a "Mr. Hyde."

Though all those attractions may be very fascinating, yet, my friend, you must remember that the true worship of God does not consist in laziness, or in lying in bed on the Sabbath day, but in work, hard, conscientious work for the Master. The old adage tells us that "Satan has to hunt the busy man, but the indolent man hunts the devil." Therefore, my brother, the easiest way to overcome the temptations which beset the commercial traveler during the long, lonely hours of the Sabbath day is to worship God while away from home in the same way you would, or rather ought to do, if you were at home. Go to the little village meeting house bright and early, and offer your services to the Sunday school superintendent, and say that you will take a class for the day if any teacher is absent. Go to the young people's meeting at night and offer there your most earnest prayer and give them the most practical, helpful talk you can. After the morning or evening sermon go to the pulpit and take the country or the city minister by the hand and tell him that you intend to pray for him and his work during the whole week. If you will do this regularly and systematically every Sabbath day you will find, oh, commercial traveler, that you have not only been a messenger to help others, but that you have deepened your own spiritual life. By such an evangelistic mission as this you will not only, by divine grace, overcome the sins peculiar to the Sabbath, but also the besetting sins which every work day lurk along the wayside of every commercial traveler's journey.

The worst dangers of a modern commercial traveler's life generally assail him when he is comparatively young. Once in a while you may find an old man who still travels upon the road, but as a rule the commercial travelers are comparatively young men. The life is so hard an older man can rarely stand the physical strain. Unless protected and restrained by the grace of God these young men are apt to fall into the traps of sin impulsively. They are apt to say to themselves, "Well, I know I ought not to sin, but I am young yet. Therefore, I can afford to sow a few wild oats and then I can repent and at last live to a respectable middle age, and even be honored in my old age."

BENEDICT ARNOLD'S SHAME.

This expectation, my young friend, might be all right if it were true. But as a rule it is not true. Generally a sinful young age means a sinful old age, if the human body is not destroyed by sin before the three-score years have been lived out. The sins of youth will generally follow a man and curse his whole after life, as the sins of Benedict Arnold's youth cursed him to the grave. Talleyrand, the great French statesman, gave a dramatic account of the desolation of the traitor. When he was exiled by the order of Napoleon and had to leave France, he intended to sail for America. Coming to the little seaport town where he was about to embark, he heard that an American gentleman was living in the hotel. So he sent up a card and asked for an interview. Talleyrand was ushered into a dark room where this American gentleman sat. Then Talleyrand said: "Sir, I have been exiled from France and expect to cross the sea and live in America. I hear that you are an American gentleman. Therefore, I craved an interview to ask you to give me a few letters of introduction to some of your friends in New York city." With that the gentleman laughed a horrible laugh. As he retreated towards the door he said: "No, Mr. Talleyrand, I cannot give you any letters to my friends in America. I am the only man today who was born in America and who has shed his blood for freedom who has not one friend in all America. My name, sir, is Benedict Arnold. I am Major General Arnold, of his majesty's service. I am Benedict Arnold the traitor." As Benedict Arnold's youthful sin followed him to the grave, so the sin into which the youthful commercial traveler falls follows him to the grave. Oh, my young friends who spend most of your life upon the road, I beg of you to seek divine help and pray, and continue to pray, that you may overcome the daily temptations of the commercial traveler's life.

A TALK IN A RAILROAD CAR.

I would plead with each one of you to consecrate yourself to the Divine Master's service, so that you may overcome the besetting sins of a life away from home. You are not at heart a bad man. You have many tender ties which ought to bind you to a life of purity and truth. In all probability you have the same kind of home ties as had the commercial traveler I once met upon the road. It was during a long, tiresome journey. Towards the evening hour, as it gradually began to darken, I closed my book and began to think about the mother of my children, and the little babies at home. I said to myself: "Yes, the little white nightgowns are now about to be put on. Yes, they must be saying their prayers about now. Yes, I can almost hear them say—'God bless Papa and Mamma!'" Then, looking across the aisle, I saw a young man about my own age open a satchel. He took out of that satchel a little paper package. He began to unfold the cloth. Then he exposed to view three or four photographs, and began to look long and earnestly at them. I crossed the aisle. Putting my hand upon the young man's shoulder, I said: "Well, old fellow, I have a wife and some babies, too." "Have you?" he answered, as his face lighted up with a smile. "Would you like to see mine?" Then we talked about home. Then his eyes became moist, when he laughingly and yet pathetically said: "Let me show you a letter I received this morning from my baby." He held up an old crumpled brown piece of paper, over which a little child's chubby finger had scribbled a lot of hieroglyphics, which witting looked like a lot of hen-tracks in a barn-yard. Then I turned and said: "You ought to be a good man with such a family of little ones." "Yes," he answered, "I know I should. And do you know, I feel that if it was not for my lovely, consecrated home, and my wife's prayers, and the thought that my little children are every night praying for me, I might yield to the many temptations of a commercial traveler's life. But every time I start to do wrong, my little children's arms

43 King Street, St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 5, 1902.

I have not enjoyed good health for the past five years, and were it not for Wine of Cardui I would still be a sufferer today. I was troubled with profuse menstruation, was very irregular and often menstruated every three weeks instead of at the proper periods. Each time I would have severe cramps and bearing down pains with backache inflicting me for office work, and compelling me to lie down for several hours each day and sometimes the entire day. I used several remedies and spent hundreds of dollars trying to get relief, but all of no avail. Fortunately, one of your ladies' Birthday Announcements came into my hands and became much interested, naturally hoping that it would cure me as it had cured others. I took my first dose that night and kept up the treatment religiously. My vitality, which had been well nigh spent by the loss of blood, was gradually restored. I noticed a marked absence of pain at the next period, also a more natural flow. I kept up the treatment for four months and found to my joy that I was entirely well, and the functions of nature were performed naturally and easily. Wine of Cardui is certainly a grand medicine and gladly do I give it entire credit for my wonderful restoration to health.

Eleanor Gray

MISS GRAY took Wine of Cardui, but it does cure menstrual troubles, which sap the body of its strength and result in back-breaking, heart-breaking pains. Wine of Cardui is a simple vegetable remedy that has cured hundreds of thousands of women suffering from leucorrhoea, bearing down pains and all the common menstrual disorders when they have taken it according to the directions on the bottle. If you will secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist and take a few doses of it every day you will have the same relief Miss Gray enjoys. Never let anyone sell you a substitute for Wine of Cardui.

That means meat to be chopped—perhaps half a dozen other things—you know all about that. The old way was to use the chopping bowl and knife, a long and tiresome operation. The new way is to use the Universal Food Chopper, a little machine that does better work than the chopping bowl and knife, and makes housework a pleasure. A call will be appreciated.

seem to cling about my neck as they cry: "Don't, papa. For your dear little babies' sake, don't sin." And so in that evening hour as the train was speeding towards my destination for lecturing, I felt as I feel now. I felt that though the average commercial traveler has many sins besetting him, yet he is armored and protected from the attacks of temptations by his absent loved ones' prayers. The average commercial traveler ought to be true to his Gospel faith, when God has given to him a lovely, consecrated Christian home. Oh, ye Knights of the Grip, will you be true to the Christ who is pleading with you today, to bow at his feet? Will ye be true to Jesus, on account of the prayers of your loved ones, even if your conscience tells you that no prayer is so appropriate for you as that of the publican, which you can utter in your own behalf?

DIVORCE CURIOSITIES.

There are 30,000 more divorced women than there are divorced men in the United States, the official figures being 84,000 divorced men and 114,000 divorced women, says the New York Sun. The disparity is accounted for by the fact that men procuring divorces or from whom divorces have been procured more often remarry than the women under like conditions.

The number of divorced men is largest in Indiana, which has 5,700. There are more than 4,000 each in California, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, New York and Pennsylvania. Texas has 3,500 and Massachusetts 2,500.

South Carolina, the only state which has no law authorizing or permitting divorces, has 275 divorced men among its residents, and South Dakota, a state which has become noted by reason of the facility with which divorces is granted, has 563.

New Jersey has, proportionately, a very small number, 750, and Kansas, a much smaller state in population, a much larger number, 2,165. In Utah where plural marriages were the rule among Mormons until recent years, the number of divorced persons is 335, a little below the average, and Idaho, with about half the population of Utah and a considerable proportion of Mormons, has 460.

The state in which there is the largest number of divorced women (divorced and not remarried) is Ohio, with 7,700; Illinois has 7,600, and Texas 5,800.

After Texas comes New York and then Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, Massachusetts and California. All of these have more than 4,000 each.

In some of the southern states, Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina and Tennessee among them, the number of divorced women is twice as large as the number of divorced men.

In Alaska there are more divorced women than divorced men; in Hawaii there are more divorced men than women.

Indiana, with a population 300,000 less than Massachusetts, has 12,000 divorced persons and Massachusetts has 6,000.

AUTHOR'S DAUGHTER.

Admirers of Rider Haggard's writings will doubtless be interested in knowing that his youngest daughter, 9-year-old Lillias, who strikingly resembles her father, already has developed a taste for writing. She has recently completed a romance in which most of the characters come to fearful ends. In this, her first attempt, she shows the influence of her father's weird romances, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Haggard family formed an interesting picture at an "at home" given by them recently at the Hall, Ditchingham, England. Mrs. Haggard, handsomely gowned; her eldest daughter, in white silk, embroidered with silver; the second daughter, Dollie, who will soon be presented; the little Lillias, and the writer himself formed the home party. One of the guests was a brother of Mrs. Haggard, who is consul in New Caledonia, and the original of Captain Good, in "King Solomon's Mines."

The novelist, tall, loose-limbed, and with a peculiar swinging gait, looked the youngster, "I asked the Lord to please remove that mole on your face, but," added the little one, "I also told the Lord that I thought the mole had come to stay."

ANXIOUS MOMENTS.

Some of the most anxious hours of a mother's life are those when the little ones of the household have the croup. There is no other medicine so effective in this terrible malady as Foley's Honey and Tar. It is a household favorite for throat and lung troubles, and as it contains no opiates or other poisons it can be safely given. Sold by Dreier & Bro. and Pellens & Polster.

Latoila is a perfect flesh food, supplying the oil it demands to prevent dryness, chafing and other unsightly effects. It supplies to the hair the oil required to make it soft and wavy, instead of dry, stiff and unmanageable. Barbers and hairdressers are delighted with it.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

HOW HE WON.

True Story of a Drinking Father's Rescue from the Overpowering Curse of Rum.

A man who has rescued himself from drink describes the climax of his fight with his appetite:

It was two years ago the seventh day of June, my little girl, Esther's birthday. I was getting ready to go to my work, when she came into the room where I was.

"I am ten years old to-day, papa," she said.

"Yes, I know it, little girl, and I've got just 15 pennies in my pocket. What will I get you?"

"I don't want you to get me anything, papa."

"Oh, I answered."

"But I want you to promise me something, papa," she said.

"Well, go ahead; let's hear it."

"I want you to promise me you won't drink any more. That will be my birthday present," she said.

"Oh, run along, little girl," I answered; "your mother has been talking to you."

I heard her go outside, and I slipped into the kitchen, where my wife was, and asked her why she had been talking to Esther about my drinking. She said she had not, and burst out crying. Then I got a little confused. I never suspected that my children knew I drank. It is true that I reeled home many a night and that I scarcely ever drew a sober breath, but they were in bed, and by morning I was always over the worst effects of the liquor. I do not know how she learned it; possibly by instinct. But it was a shock to me, and unnerved me. I went back into the sitting room and began to choke up. I tried to clear my throat by swallowing, but couldn't do it. My eyes were filling with tears, although I couldn't cry. I threw myself full length on the couch and sobbed out a sort of prayer: "Lord, if you'll help me, I'll never touch liquor again." In a little while Esther came running in, saw me, and said:

"Papa, you've made up your mind to promise, haven't you? I know it."

"Yes, I have, little girl. I am going to try never to drink again, and more than that, I am going to put a penny in your bank for every time I refuse a glass."

Do you know that in seven weeks I had 277 pennies in that bank? But election time came on, and one morning I found that some one during the night had rolled a keg of beer to my door. "That settles the penny proposition, Esther," I said when I saw it.

"I guess there are more glasses in that keg than I have pennies. Children, roll it over there on the commons." They did so, and it remained there a couple of days, but was gone the third morning. My old boon friends have given up trying to get me to break my promise. When I saw that man there in a saloon, last April, one of the men at the bar, to test me, put a gold piece in the bottom of a glass and told the bartender to fill the glass with beer.

"Do you mean it?" he said.

"Of course I do. Go ahead."

He did and then my friend turned to me and said: "O, drink the beer and keep the gold."

"Not if you filled my pockets with gold," I answered.

Not long ago my five children were attacked with diphtheria. I lost a sweet little six-year-old girl. Before she died she threw her arms around my neck as I sat at the bed and said: "Papa, you kept your promise, didn't you?"

Will any sane man tell me that I'll ever drink again?—National Advocate.

ALCOHOLISM IN CHILDREN.

Startling State of Affairs Revealed by Dr. Roubinovitch in European Journal.

One would think that a chapter with this heading must necessarily be a short one, but unfortunately it is not so, as we learn from an article on "Infantile Alcoholism," contributed to the Gazette des Hopitaux (June 14) by Dr. Roubinovitch. The writer tells us that it is not at all unusual to find children suffering from the effects of alcoholic drinks taken to excess, sometimes by themselves, but often by their parents, whose sins are thus visited upon them in accordance with the Scriptural assertion. We translate below part of a review of Dr. Roubinovitch's article contributed to Cosmos (July 5) by Dr. L. Menard. Says this writer:

"It is certain that alcoholism is frequently found in the ancestors of epileptics and insane persons. It is found still oftener among the parents of children suffering from mental weakness, morbid obsessions, etc., and this leads us to cases in which nervous trouble brought on by congenital intoxication shows itself in children by dipsomania—a malady characterized by periodical and irresistible desire to drink alcohol. There is a feeling of acute anxiety when the child is in the presence of wine or liquor, and this is not allayed until the desire has been satisfied. It is the effect of hereditary transmission of the appetite for alcohol, which leads its victim to chronic alcoholism with all its consequences.

"We shall get a very good idea, says Roubinovitch, of the hereditary consequences of alcoholism, so far as the nervous system is concerned, by studying these statistics given by Denme: Of 57 children in alcoholic families selected at hazard he found (besides 25 who died when only a few weeks old), 12 idiots, five cases of hydrocephaly, five epileptics, two dipsomaniacs, and only eight normal persons.

"As a corollary of all these mental hereditary-alcoholic manifestations, we find that infantile or juvenile criminality is more and more accentuated in the families of drinkers. In Switzerland, half of the children in the houses of correction had alcoholic parents, according to an investigation of the federal council in 1894.

"Alcoholism from nursing is a well-demonstrated clinical fact. The alcohol passes into the mother's milk, and numbers of cases of illness and convulsions among young children have no other cause than the sometimes unconscious alcoholism of the nurse.

"In a school where the children were from four to six years of age, the teacher, giving a lesson on coffee, asked this question:

"What do we put in coffee?"

"Sugar," answered several children.

"Brandy," said the others.

"Children," said the teacher, "brandy ought not to be put into coffee."

"I don't put mine into the coffee," spoke up a little tot; "I do like papa and mamma; I drink it alone in my cup, after I have finished my coffee."

"Then the teacher asked: 'Are there other children here who drink their brandy in their cups?'"

"Five little hands were raised. And that was the usual proportion.

"Alcohol in the form of brandied fruit, bonbons containing liquors, or rum-soaked cake, should never be given to children.

"We may often observe in nursing children nervous troubles akin to meningitis and having no other cause than alcoholic intoxication. But they may also manifest acute alcoholism in the form of actual drunkenness.

"Alcohol acts, then, in different ways with children. If the child is congenitally tainted by the poison, it may present a type of degeneracy that is in some degree due to the alcoholic poisoning of its ancestors. Alcohol can also lead to troubles that are more specially attributable to its hereditary influence, such as certain obsessions, night terrors, and particularly dipsomania. Finally, alcoholism in the parents gives rise to a disposition to the same trouble in the children."

TEMPERANCE PROGRESS.

A Swedish temperance society has been organized at Milbank, S. D., with 68 members.

It is stated by Mr. Pihlman, of the London Temperance Council, that, taking London as a whole, drink was the direct cause, at the very lowest estimate, of 42,000 deaths during 1901.

The report from Peking is that the Chinese authorities have ordered all foreign saloon keepers to close their saloons and to leave the city within three days, thereby removing from the city one disgrace to western civilization and a hindrance to mission work.

There is a statute in Pennsylvania which provides that saloon keepers shall be held responsible in damages for injuries resulting from their sale of liquors to intoxicated persons, and the supreme court of the city has lately made a decision which sustains the law as constitutional and equitable.

Plan Temperance Campaign.

Members of the board of government of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, at a meeting at New York, have mapped out a campaign in the interests of temperance. A general appeal will be made to hierarchy and clergy of the United States on behalf of total abstinence. Lecture bureaus will be established, and another body, to be known as the national committee, will be selected from the most prominent temperance workers of the church.

Belgian Criminal Statistics.

According to Dr. Masoin, professor of medicine at the Louvain university, Belgian criminality is much increasing on account of the present drinking habits. In one penitentiary prison (that of Louvain), out of the criminal perpetrators of heinous offenses 11 per centum were habitual drunkards. Out of the convicts sentenced to hard labor 54 per cent. were notorious drunkards. Out of the heinous offenders condemned to death 60 per cent. had been too fond of intoxicating drinks. As to minor offenders punished by imprisonment from one to five years and whose offenses have been committed under the influence of liquor: Men, 40 per cent.; women, 13 per cent. Offenses by habitual drunkards: Men, 45 per cent.; women, 24 per cent.

THE BOY GIANT And His Medicine

Copyright, 1900, by Caroline Wetherill

Ah Grim caught a cold in his chest And coughed; 'twas a terrible pest, For it jolted the town. And it shook fences down— Oh, much were the townsfolk distressed! So Jack put the giant to bed And called in the doctors, who said: "Some cod liver oil, Quinine and cinquefoil, Then bathe both his feet and his head."

The drugstores grew rich in a day; Jack wondered how ever he'd pay; For plasters and pills To cure giant ills Cost so much as to well cause dismay. Ah Grim was averse to the draft, Which gingerly, slowly, he quaffed. But they gave him a dime— In Jack Robinson time He gulped down the mixtures and laughed.

Naughty Jacko.

Jacko is a monkey and belonged to granny. One day mother and I went to stay with granny, and the first day we arrived he threw a five pound note into the fire. He was forgiven for this, because, of course, he could not be expected to know that one bit of paper was of more value than another.

He was kept chained to a perch in the dining room, and one morning at breakfast time he jumped on mother's shoulder, held on to her hair with one hand and with the other picked up a piece of butter from her plate and began eating it. Mother screamed, and when Jacko noticed that every one was looking at him he hopped back to his perch. After that his chain was shortened.

Another day he ate a straw hat first and then, snipping his collar, seized a carving knife, rushed into the village and frightened some people.

That was the last straw, and now Jacko has gone to the zoo and lives there in a cage with other monkeys.—London Stories.

Pussy and the Thru.

Our pussy is very naughty sometimes, and a little while ago she found a Thrush's nest and got up close to it and frightened the poor mother bird dreadfully. Luckily, she couldn't quite reach the nest. But since then the birds are afraid of her, and now that they have some young ones it is quite funny to watch them.

As soon as pussy appears in the garden they fly round and round about her, making such a noise, and the other day when we were watching we saw them both come back, each carrying a worm, and they dropped them down right in front of pussy, evidently with the idea that she would like them. But she wasn't a bit grateful and only walked on, holding her head a little higher than usual.

Tantalizing.

Mamma—Tommy, what is the meaning of the word "tantalizing"? Tommy—Please, ma, it means a circus passing the schoolhouse and the scholars not allowed to look out.

The idea that there is no head cheese to be found within a mile of us! It's a Jay town, that's what."

"I'll leave an order with some butcher or tomorrow," said Mrs. Bowser. "I have no doubt he'll make up a small quantity to order."

"But I want it tonight and can't sleep without it. If you were a true wife, you'd have my interests at heart."

"Could I tell that you would suddenly crave for head cheese?"

"Certainly you could, but you were looking out for yourself. How is the stuff made?"

"I don't believe I know."

"And why not? It is your business to know. Suppose I said I didn't know how to saw a board in two?"

"I—I think there's pork and grease in it," she faltered.

"And you may think there's tar and gravel in it also. By John, but the woman of today has about as much idea of housekeeping as a cat has of playing the piano! It is costing me millions of dollars a year to run this house, and yet if I want a pound of head cheese I can't get it!"

Mrs. Bowser felt helpless in the matter and therefore wanted to drop the subject, but after waiting about for a few minutes and glaring at the cat in a way to make the poor feline shiver Mr. Bowser suddenly declared:

"I believe I can make the stuff myself."

"I don't see how you can."

"No, of course not. But I do, and I'm going down to the kitchen. Should you want to go to bed before I get through don't wait for me."

He went down to the kitchen and the icebox, and in the latter he found some cold beefsteak, cold potatoes, eggs, celery, radishes, bananas and cheese. For a minute he stood and let his mind wander back to bygone days, but he couldn't remember how his mother made the dish he craved for.

He had a dim recollection that she mixed things up and used a bowl and a chopping knife, and that was what he proceeded to do. If he used beef, there would be no grease, and if he threw in the rest of the ingredients he would have a salad out of it anyhow.

As he chopped away at the beef he added the other things one at a time, and in the course of half an hour he scraped all into a dish, poured on olive oil and vinegar and pepper and salted it to his taste.

"By John, but I've struck it!" he softly exclaimed as he carried the first spoonful to his mouth. "This is the stuff to sharpen the appetite and make a man feel as if he could eat nails. It's head cheese as they call it, and I believe if I was to put it up in paper boxes it would sell like hot cakes."

Mr. Bowser ate heartily. Whenever his appetite hesitated, he added a little more vinegar and set the wheels going again. Toward the last he found a Bermuda onion and a part of a pineapple and added them to the contents, and he enthusiastically decided that they increased the "twang." When he could hold no more, he went up to the sitting room. Mrs. Bowser had gone up stairs, and he sat down to finish his smoke and newspaper. All went well for a quarter of an hour, and a cricket was singing on the hearth and the cat rubbing against his legs when a sudden pain seized him. It lasted only two or three seconds, but by the time he had sunk back in his chair it came again, and this time it lifted him to his feet. The cat looked up at him in wonder, and he had doubts whether it was the toothache or a new corn. Not for long, however. The next pain humped him up and twisted him around and lifted his heels, and he yelled for Mrs. Bowser and fell upon the lounge.

"Well?" she asked as she came down stairs.

"I—I've got awful pains!" he gasped.

"What did you eat?"

"Most everything. It must be a case of bilious colic. Lord, but how I suffer! Say, I'm a dead man!"

"I never heard of head cheese killing anybody."

"But it's killing me! Ouch! Wood! Woman, telephone for the doctor or I won't live an hour!"

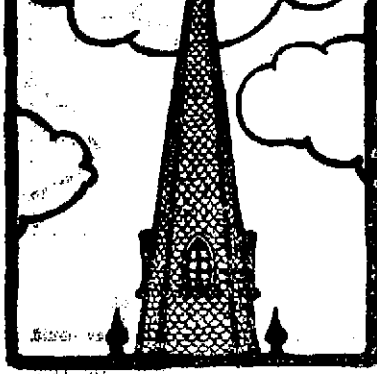

Half an hour later the doctor arrived, and he worked over the patient for a long hour before he was ready to go. He had his hat on when Mr. Bowser piteously asked:

"O—doctor, will I live?"

"Oh, yes," was the cheerful reply. "Yes; an ass always lives to be sixty years old, no matter what he eats, and I believe you are only fifty!"

"FOR ME."

Some years ago in a time of great religious interest in the Presbyterian church of Urbana, Ohio, I gave out to be sung the hymn commencing:

"I am so glad that our Father in heaven Tells of His love in the Book He has given; Wonderful things in the Bible I see. This is the dearest, that Jesus loves me."

I said: "This is a hymn you can all sing; for although you may not love Jesus, it is certainly true that He loves you, for He loves everybody." A man and his wife who had been attending the meetings without coming into the light were impressed by the thought that Jesus loved them personally, and very soon afterward they were ready to confess Him as their Savior.

It is a great matter to learn to use aright the personal pronoun of the first person singular in our relations to God. The publican prayed: "God be merciful to me a sinner," and obtained mercy. David says: "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want." Paul says: "I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me."

All the bread in the world will not keep me from starving if I do not partake of it. The infinite atonement of Jesus Christ will not save me if I do not accept Him as my personal Savior. The word of God authorizes me to believe that Jesus died for me. I have, indeed, erred and strayed from the way of God like a lost sheep, but it was for just such persons Jesus Christ died. "God commendeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." He Himself says: "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners." The fact that I am a sinner is the very fact that warrants me to believe that Jesus died for me.

If these words fall under the eye of anyone who is hesitating about becoming a Christian I would say to such a one, read the portions of Scripture that form the basis for the topic now under consideration as having particular reference to your own case. Read Isaiah 53:6, in this way: "I, like a sheep, have gone astray; I have turned to my own way; and the Lord hath laid on Jesus my iniquity." Read Luke 22:19, 20, as addressed to yourself personally: "This is my body, which is given for thee." This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for thee." Read Romans 6:8, thus: "God commendeth His love toward me, in that while I was yet a sinner Christ died for me." Read I John 3:16, in this way: "Hereby I perceive the love of God, because He laid down His life for me."

J. N. Patterson, night policeman of Nashua, Ia., writes: "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least half dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two-thirds of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world." Sold by Dreier & Bro. and Pellens & Polster.

A THANKSGIVING DINNER.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures the catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. Meyer Bros. & Co.

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA, SATURDAY

And Master Clown Jr. a bean blower and a trouncing proper had he, ho! ho!

THE RESOURCEFUL CHINAMAN

Dubbe—"What if my washing hasn't come home? I can wear my frock coat buttoned over my flannel shirt."

Her Father (fond of parlor magic)—"Now I'll show the rabbit right in Mr. Dubbe's inside pocket—Hullo!"

SOLITUDE.

He—"Sometimes I like to be alone with my thoughts."
She—"My! You must be lonesome on these occasions!"

INDUCEMENT.

Life Insurance Agent—"Why, just look at this list. I've insured twenty-four men in the last six months and seventeen of them are seriously ill at the present moment!"

ANYTHING TO OBLIGE.

Mrs. Lovet—"Will you kindly pick up my boy, sir?"

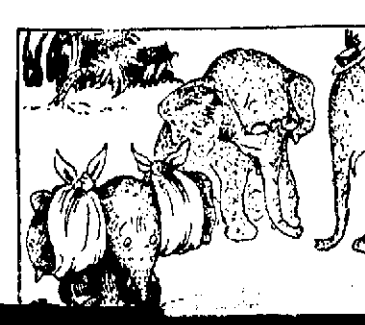

Prof. Everdream—"With pleasure, madam!"

LAST RESORT.

Mrs. Cackle—"You're getting to talk in your sleep."
Mr. Cackle—"Have to; it's the only chance I get."

RESTRAINT.

Uncle Bellamy—"I am sure that there are interesting and valuable historical relics here and I'm going to have 'em!"

"Ha! A mysterious brick wall, and I've been extending my tunnel only three days!"

"This interior is doubtless part of some ancient forgotten palace of the early conquerors! And, oh, say! What port!"

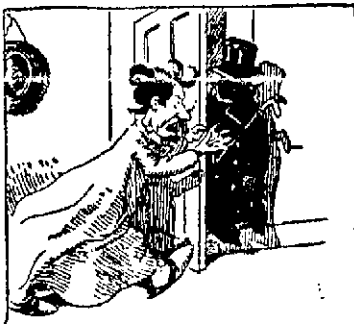

Mrs. Bellamy—"Are you crazy, you old toper? If not, why are you making such a mess of your own cellar?"

HIS SAFE HOME-COMING.

Mrs. Lodge-Smith—"There comes that intoxicated desperado. Just let me get hold of him!"

"You will stay out till all sorts of hours, will you? Tottering dipsomaniac!"

"I'll pound the immortality out of you! I'll teach you to make a tank of yourself!"

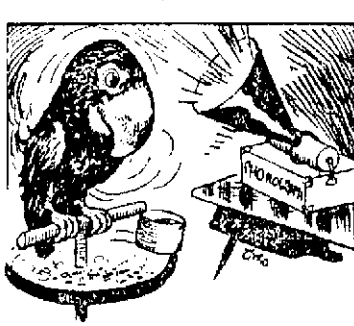

Lodge-Smith—"Rather violent exercise for a woman of your age, eh, my dear?"

GREAT SCHEME.

Mouse—"There's the cat! Cuzas I'll put that skin over my shoulders and pretend I'm a bear!"

ADMIRATION.

Polly—"There's real good manners for you! It can talk all day without stopping!"

OUT OF THE QUESTION.

Now that some of our country clubs are establishing friendly relations with the neighboring farmers the chase of the antised bag will certainly become more popular.

HE DIDN'T LAST LONG.

Visitor—"And what brought this poor man to such a pass?"
Attendant—"Ah, sir, he is the man who got up names for all the new health foods, poor chap."

POINT OF VIEW.

Dust—"Who in the world would want to use that stuff?"

MEAN TRICK.

Porky Pine—"Seems to me that Br'er Armadillo has a good job as a bowling ball. Wonder what they pay him a game?"

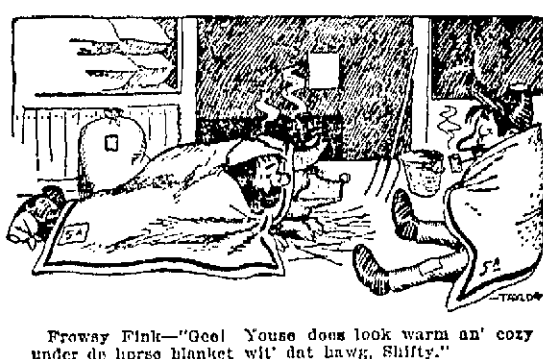

"I believe I'll try it. All you have to do is to roll up when they want you to and walk back afterward. Here goes."

"Yet! There, I thought so!"

"Isn't that pretty good for one shot?"

TRUTH OF THE MATTER.

Before and after taking.

NO SUFFERING AS YET.

Maude—"The high price of the necessities of life is awful, isn't it?"
Mabel—"Why, I hadn't noticed that caramels had gone up."

A black and white line drawing of a woman in a long, flowing dress with a wide belt and a large hat, labeled 'GARDEN PARTY DRESS'. The dress features a high collar, long sleeves with ruffled cuffs, and a full skirt with a decorative hem. The woman is wearing a large, ornate hat with a wide brim and a decorative band. The drawing is a full-length portrait, showing the woman from the top of her head to the bottom of her dress. The style is characteristic of early 20th-century fashion illustrations. The text 'GARDEN PARTY DRESS' is written in a simple, sans-serif font to the right of the woman's waist.

Do men dress to please women or to suit themselves? I asked a man this question the other day.

"We dress to suit ourselves," said he. "Women don't know anything about men's clothes."

But every man was wearing his fourth suit of gray trousers because one woman had said that she always liked to see a man dressed in gray. Then, feeling my questioning glance at his gray, said he:

"Of course, if a woman happens to like a particular style we may as well follow it."

And as a rule we women do. We prescribe clothes for a man. First we are afraid of a man who wears his own attire. We are slow in coming for any radical change in men's clothes. We like clothes that have borrowed some of their elements from individuality. So far, hats, shoes, have been worn until they are almost shabby, smoking coats that look as though could they break they might kill.

Most men look well in their hunting togs. All men look well in tweed; and, strange as it may seem, not one woman in ten thinks that a man looks his best in his dress dress.

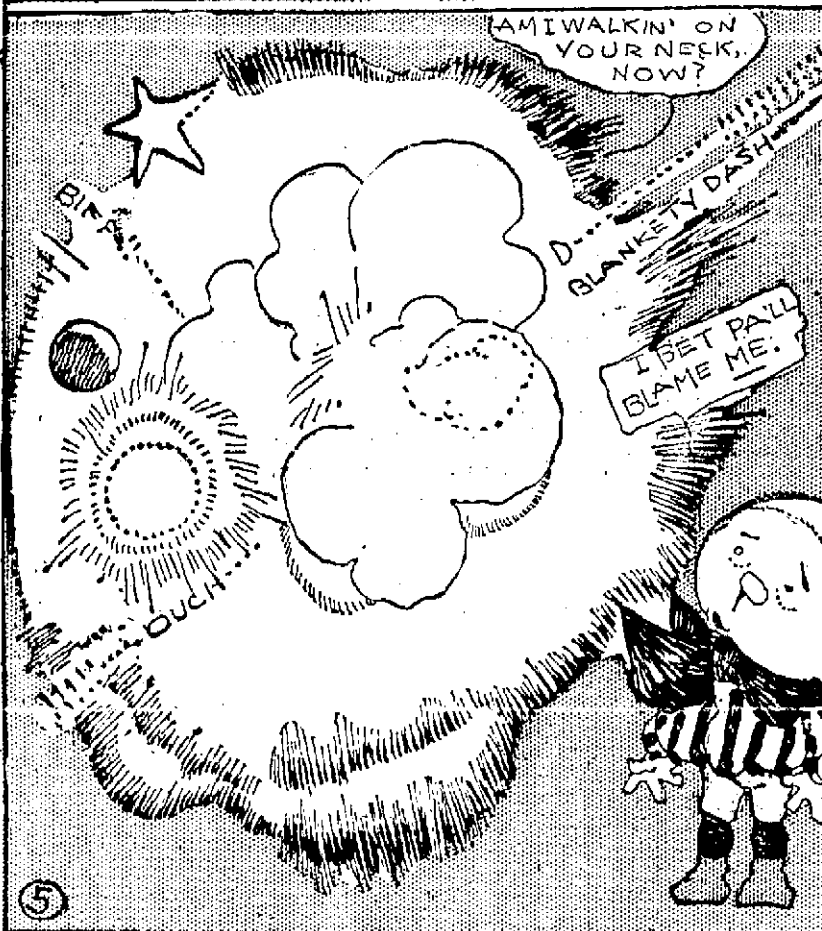

Man's dress has arrived at its present sensible condition through the influence of his grandfathers. I wonder, look any better in their suits and faces than the well-dressed man of to-day looks in his barely dressed

The mill owners exert, as far as possible, an influence over the moral tone of their employees. The average girls are self-respecting, yet they trifle with love. The attraction they wish to exert is ever present in their attitude and in their conversation. Their most important sacrifices are invariably for clothes. They have superstitions of all kinds; to sneeze on Saturday means the arrival of a beau on Sunday; a big or little tooth-ache means a long or short courtship. There is a book of dreams kept at one table in the mill, the girls consult it on their dreams, and the mill owners are ever ready to explain them. They are fanciful, sentimental, cold, pusillanimous—these Van Vleet in "Everybody's Magazine."
